Wallace May Quit Cabinet After His Notification

Observers See Intention Behind Plan to Withhold Campaign Till Then

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace is expected to leave his Cabinet post soon after August 20 ceremonies notifying him of his Democratic nomination for Vice President.

Observers yesterday read this probable decision into the Secretary's closely guarded remarks following his first conference with the President since both were nominated at the Chicago Democratic convention.

Wallace said only that it has been decided he will not engage in any political activities before his notification "someplace in Iowa," and possibly not for some time thereafter.

Successors Considered

The President may be questioned for more details of their talk at his press conference today. Washington speculation ran strongly to the probable prompt separation of the Secretary from his department right after his acceptance speech, either through a long leave of absence or outright resignation.

No decision is believed to have been reached as yet on his successor. The choice must hinge on whether Wallace merely takes leave or resigns. Several names prominent in present and past New Deal farm program work, and editors of several farm publications, have been proposed for the post.

Meantime, the President next week must designate the man he wants to fill the job of chairman of the Democratic National Committee when James A. Farley steps down August 17.

A special subcommittee of the Democratic National Committee will wait on Mr. Roosevelt around August 1. The President is still reported to favor his close personal friend, Frank Walker, former director of the National Emergency Council, who has been reluctant to accept.

McNutt Strongly Backed

If Walker refuses to be "drafted," which friends strongly doubt, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, who withdrew from the Vice Presidential race to make way for Wallace, has strong Administration backing.

McNutt is wise in the ways of politics and has good contacts in every State through his managers. Whether he would be willing to accept might be contingent on an accompanying appointment to the post of Postmaster General, from which Farley also will resign.

Postmaster General Farley will come to Washington to confer with the President late this week or early next week.

Following his 45-minute confer-

$120,000,000 Gold Mailed to Ft. Knox; Postage, $1,000,000

New York, July 25 (AP).—Gold bars worth $120,00,000—the first of a $5,000,000,000 consignment—were loaded into baggage cars tonight for shipment by mail to the Federal depository at Fort Knox, Ky.

The Postoffice Department, meanwhile, prepared to bill the Treasury Department for $1,000,000 worth of postage required to send tonight's shipment.

Bristling with rifles, postal inspectors and Army details convoyed the yellow "pigs" to the Pennsylvania Railroad Station in regular United States mail trucks, which had no armor other than wire mesh.

Ordinary registered mail stamps were used for payment.

Luxembourg's Royal Refugees Arrive, Grateful for Haven

ROYAL REFUGEES—Prince Felix of Luxembourg (left), who was a White House visitor last year, brought his six children with him yesterday to partake of the President's hospitality

Luxembourg's royal family, refugees from their Nazi-invaded grand duchy, arrived here yesterday grateful for the shelter of a free nation.

They had been evacuated from Lisbon by the 7,500-ton United States cruiser Trenton, as an international courtesy, Grand Dutchess Charlotte, actual ruler of the 999-square-mile country, stayed behind in Lisbon.

Prince Consort Felix, his four blonde daughters, two sons, three servants and two pet dogs, touched American soil at Annapolis, spent three hours in the District, featured by lunch with President Roosevelt, and answered for Americans the question:

How do royal refugees spend their first hours in a land of liberty?

From the time they awoke yesterday morning and looked out the Trenton's porthole to see the flat, green shores of Maryland until their 3 p. m. train carried them

Willkie to See Sprague, Dewey Leader, Today

Nominee Ends Tour, Maps Agenda for Iowa Farm Conference

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 25 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie will confer tomorrow with J. Russell Sprague, New York Republican National Committeeman and a co-manager of Thomas E. Dewey's unsuccessful campaign for the Republican nomination.

Sprague reported he would support Willkie shortly after the latter obtained the nomination.

Willkie returned to his vacation headquarters today from a quick campaign swing through two Western States, then settled down to consider arrangements for his acceptance address at Elwood, Ind.

The Republican Presidential nominee, who made seven speeches and shook hands with thousands of persons on a 1,400-mile tour through Wyoming and Utah, landed in his special plane at 3:45 p. m. (M. S. T.)

Later he discussed arrangements for his August 17 acceptance talk with Representative Charles A. Halleck (Republican), Indiana; Arch N. Bobbitt, Indiana Republican Chairman, and Homer S. Capehart, Washington, Ind., manufacturer.

To Discuss Agriculture

Des Moines, Iowa, July 25 (AP).—Wendell Willkie will discuss the Nation's agricultural problems August 5 in a conference with Republican Governors, candidates for Governor and farm leaders of eight Midwestern States in the Iowa Statehouse here.

Gov. George A. Wilson of Iowa said the list of invited conferees includes Govs. Stassen of Minnesota, Bushfield of South Dakota, Ratner of Kansas and Heil of Wisconsin.

Capper Urges Mass Rally For D. C. Vote

Demonstrate When Committee Weighs Plea, He Suggests

The District suffrage campaign progressed along two fronts yesterday as sentiment in favor of action at this session of Congress increased on Capitol Hill.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansan, veteran leader in the struggle for national representation, suggested that Washington civic leaders demonstrate their interest in the vote by "a mass demonstration" when the House Judiciary Committee meets Tuesday to consider the Sumners resolution.

Assurance that suffrage legislation would have Republican support in the Senate came from Minority Leader McNary meanwhile as additional support of the Sumners resolution in the House Judiciary Committee indicated that it would receive a favorable report.

"I stoutly favor suffrage in the District and believe most of the Republican members of the Senate share this view," Senator McNary, Republican candidate for Vice President, wrote in a memorandum in answer to requests for comment from the press. He declined to amplify the statement.

Randolph Awaits Report

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, said he would await the decision of the Judiciary Committee before considering proposals to initiate legislation providing for local suffrage.

He agreed, however, to confer with representatives of the District Suffrage Association in his office Monday night and invited Representatives Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, to attend.

162 Arrested in Vice Raids On Four Downtown Places

Striking simultaneously at three downtown restaurants and a hotel, District police and Federal marshals last night arrested 162 men and women in the biggest vice raid here in years.

After questioning each of the prisoners, police charged 25 of them, mostly women, with conspiracy to violate the Federal laws.

The round-up and arrests followed several months of undercover investigation of prostitution here.

With warrants in their possession for a number of the persons found in the restaurants and hotel, police arrested nearly everybody found on the premises.

The raiders, led by Capt. Harvey Callahan, of First Precinct station, who recently was graduated from the Federal Bureau of Investigation Police Academy, and engineered by Precinct Detective Roy Blick, vice investigator, included 6 detectives, 12 uniformed police, and 9 United States marshals.

At 9:45 they entered three restaurants, at 453, 500 and 508 G street northwest, and a hotel at 606 Fifth street northwest, blocked off all exits and lined up the patrons for the arrival of two patrol wagons, which after numerous trips brought all the prisoners to the First Precinct station, 400 block New Jersey

Heat Fells 8; Relief Due Tomorrow

D. C. Man Perishes While Swimming; G.P.O. Air-Cooling Tube Falls, Hurts 4

The weatherman yesterday assured the District a definite break tomorrow in the heat wave as the ninth day of torridity brought one death, eight prostrations, and a swimming accident.

Four Government Printing Office employes were injured and 60 others were imperiled when a 100-foot length of air-conditioning tubing collapsed upon workers in the third floor of the new G. O. P. Building at North Capitol and H streets.

D. C. Baker Drowns

Henry G. Kroll, 65, of 3011 Sixteenth street northeast, died while swimming in Chesapeake Bay at Long Beach, Md., yesterday. Dr. Everard Briscoe, Calvert County medical examiner, said last night that death was caused by a heart attack.

According to spectators at the beach, Kroll was seen to struggle, and died within a few minutes after he was taken ashore. Kroll, a baker, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Kroll, of Washington, and three daughters.

The mercury soared to 95 yesterday, with a humidity that rose to 60 per cent, adding to the discomfort. The tropical spell is due to continue today with the forecaster expecting a maximum temperature of 96, one degree below the record established last Saturday.

Cold Front on Way

But the end is in sight—for the week-end. Showers and a thunderstorm Saturday afternoon will signal the arrival of a "cold front" moving slowly from the Northwest and bringing with it moderate temperatures for Saturday evening and Sunday.

Collapse of the air-cooling pipe, encased in plaster and about 3 feet in diameter, occurred at about 4:50 p. m., 20 minutes after the GPO night shift had reported for work. The tubing fell with a crash that was heard by residents in the neighborhood.

Most seriously hurt in the accident was Robert E. Dalton, 39, of 200 Massachusetts avenue northwest, who was taken to Casualty Hospital with severe injuries to the head, face, and back. Less seriously hurt were George Marshall, of Brentwood, Md.; Walter A. Leeds, of 1620 Ridge place southeast, and Elmer Welch, 623 Alabama avenue southeast. They were treated at the GPO first aid station.

Young Bather Injured

Five-year-old Shirley Pettis, of 1244 Wisconsin avenue northwest, suffered a gash on the chin when she slipped in the pool at Georgetown Playground. She was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Heat prostration victims included Mrs. Kathryn Johannsen, 55, of 809 Eighteenth street northwest; Louis Sisson, 56, of 431 Eleventh street northwest; August Olmi, 65, of 49 H street northwest; William B. Ould, 55, of 1005 Shepherd street northeast, Mrs. A. Stevenson, 80, of 949 Shepherd street northwest; Garland Smith, 30, colored, 1518 Ninth street northwest.

Reich Warns U. S. to Expect Nazi Rule of Trade; Argentina Bars Hull Plan for Colonies

Let Colonial Peoples Decide Fate Themselves, Melo Suggests

By the Associated Press

Havana, July 25.—Leopoldo Melo, head Argentine delegate, declared tonight his country was opposed to Pan-American trusteeships or mandates over European possessions in this hemisphere.

The future status of those possessions should be determined by the people involved and without outside pressure, he told a press conference.

Thus Argentina, big question mark of Pan-American solidarity, fulfilled the predictions of most conference observers that she was opposed to the "collective trusteeship" idea advanced by the United States, Brazil and other American republics.

Argentina was willing to debate the question at the conference, he said, but was not prepared to "sacrifice" her "fundamental juridical principles."

Delegates from European possessions should be heard at the conference, he said.

Proposals before the conference on Pan-American security were aimed at forestalling the transfer of French, Dutch or British possessions to any other non-American power.

Earlier some delegates expressed the belief that Argentina's viewpoint could be reconciled.

Opposed to Force

But Melo said his own proposal would block the conference from taking any measures regarding those possessions which were based on "hypothesis." American nations have no right to dedicate such powers to themselves, he said.

"Argentina could not countenance the application of force over American territory even in the guise of treaties or conventions effected among the Americas," he said.

He explained that cessions of European territories in this hemisphere, if arranged by treaty between European powers, should be acceptable to the American republics if it was acceptable to the people in those territories.

Argentina's views were submitted tonight to the second emergency conference of American ministers, including Secretary of State Hull.

It was expected Argentina would refuse any economic plans at the conference, too, if there was a chance those plans would jeopardize her future relations with Europe to which so much of her commerce has been directed.

Seek Broader Cooperation

Deep in 45 new or revived proposals for closer relations between the American republics, delegates to the Pan-American Conference tonight studied inter-American economy and finance—backbone of the hemisphere's solidarity.

Inventor Builds Concrete Fort In Five Hours at Secret Test

READY FOR ACTION—Although the concrete for this "pillbox" with one gun port showing had been poured only a few hours earlier, the little fort's dome was strong enough to hold three men

Something new in a bomb-resisting "pillbox" was demonstrated amid considerable secrecy yesterday to Army and Congressional leaders on an isolated section of the Potomac River shore near First street and Potomac avenue southwest.

Constructed of concrete in 5 hours, complete with gun-openings and trench approach, the dome-shaped fortress was exhibited by Karl Billner, of Philadelphia, president of Vacuum Concrete, Inc.

Before a few dignitaries, Billner showed that the necessity for speed in constructing fortifications—and even air-raid shelters—need be no handicap in an emergency. He pointed out that duplications of his experimental "pillbox" could be erected on a wholesale scale in a matter of hours.

A good supply of regular concrete, a large rubber balloon and a dozen steel forms, especially designed for "pillbox" construction, were used in yesterday's demonstration.

First the balloon was inflated. Then the steel forms were placed—

Bombers Roar Over Britain In Torrent

Swarms of Planes Battle Off Coast; 20 Nazis Shot Down

By the Associated Press

London, July 25.—A literal torrent of Nazi bombers thundered over the coasts of England today against the gallant defense of British planes and guns.

Today the bombers, roaring swiftly across the Channel that once was Britain's barrier inviolate, drove even King George to an air raid shelter. They came in swarms of 80, to dive and blast at shipping, harbors, shores and inland localities . . . sometimes strung out in long, seemingly endless lines.

Twenty of them—11 bombers and 9 fighters—were shot down, one by a Norwegian motor torpedo boat.

The waves of Nazi air invaders came over the white cliffs of the southeast today with a noise "like the continuous rumble of thunder," one native said.

80 Attack Convoy

In the early morning 80 planes screamed down upon one merchant convoy and, in a few minutes, the sky was full of fighting German and British planes.

The Germans scattered, but came back. Some flew on to the southwest, boxed by antiaircraft bursts.

The King was on a tour of naval training camps when the bombers came over.

He saw them while he was just outside the entrance to one camp. He calmly lit a cigarette, then strolled to a shelter. He remained

Job Guarantee Written Into Draft Bill

Senate Committee Agrees on Plan to Force Rehiring

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday amended the pending conscription bill to compel the reemployment of men drafted for military service.

Employers engaged in interstate commerce who fail to rehire workers after their year's Army training would be held guilty of "unfair labor practice" under the National Labor Relations Act, under a unanimous vote of the committee, Chairman Sheppard announced.

Government workers called into military service also would be guaranteed their jobs under the committee action. They would be given extended leave of absence without pay.

As this action was taken, the War Department announced establishment of a general headquarters similar to that of Gen. John J. Pershing, which was abandoned in 1920. The nucleus of the new headquarters will be at the Army War College here and initially will be concerned simply with training the expanded Army field forces, including draftees assigned to the regulars and National Guard.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, said the move also would give the Army a working field force headquarters "which otherwise would have to be created out of the whole cloth in an emergency."

Gold Is a 'Dogma'

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, July 25.—The United State was warned by Adolf Hitler's minister of economics tonight that she must be prepared to trade with a victorious Germany on Germany's terms after the war or suffer a lockout from the commerce of a whole Europe geared to Nazi economics.

The warning was couched in vigorous terms by Walther Funk in a 45-minute interview.

He said also that the United States must give up the idea of forcing her conditions on Germany by a "united front" with the other American nations.

If the United States expects to make any use of her gold hoard, Funk said, she must revalue her dollar upward so it can flow out of America and goods flow in.

Speaks of U. S. Gold

"When you play marbles and one fellow wins away all the marbles the game ends," he said. "You must then think of some new game. What all the gold is in the United States and it doesn't come out again the world must think of some other medium of exchange."

Picturing a Europe in which all other European countries will dovetail their production into German needs and exchange largely on the barter system, Funk stated flatly that the reichsmark would be the dominating currency on the continent—a strictly pegged currency.

But he denied formation of a single monetary or customs union in Europe is contemplated, however strong its economic solidarity.

Expects Cartel Plan to Fail

Part of Funk's remarks were called forth by the Pan-American conference in Havana. He made it clear he did not think much of the economic plan advanced there by the United States for formation of a cartel to absorb South American surpluses.

"The economic preconditions are lacking for success of such a plan," he said, "for the United States can never absorb South American products to the extent Europe can.

"The United States must give up

Lee Introduces Senate Bill To 'Draft Money'

A bill empowering the President to "draft money" was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

The measure declares it is "to prevent profiteering and to make the financial resources of the Nation available to the Government for national defense on the same mandatory basis as manpower."

It authorizes the President to establish a plan "for drafting the use of money according to each individual's ability to lend." It sets the same penalties for noncompliance to the draft of money as apply to the draft of men."

"If we're in such an emergency as to conscript the lives of men, we should go all the way and conscript profits," observed Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana.

Softening the Blow

British Admit Loss of Liner With 2,823 in Fleeing France

Lancastria Hit by Air Bombs in Retreat From St. Nazaire a Month Ago; 300 Killed As Nazi Torpedo Boat Sinks French Vessel

By the Associated Press

London, July 25.—The government announced today that "a deliberate and callous" attack by a German torpedo boat, off the heavily guarded Portland naval base, last night had sunk the 6,127-ton French merchantman Meknes, crammed with 1,300 French naval officers and men on their way to repatriation. From 300 to 450 were lost.

Then, after waiting for a month to soften the blow, the censorship permitted publication of the fact that 2,823 British troops and refugees, some of them women and children, still are missing from the bombing and sinking of the 16,243-ton Cunarder Lancastria, while she lay at anchor in the French harbor of St. Nazaire in mid-June, evacuating the last of the B. E. F. There had been 5,300 aboard the vessel.

This was the first time the authorities had permitted any mention of the Lancastria disaster. It ranks as the greatest sea catastrophe of the war, so far as is yet known.

(In New York C. B. S. intercepted a special bulletin from the German radio last night claiming that German planes which raided a convoy in the English Channel yesterday, had sunk 11 of the 23 vessels, damaging three others. Total tonnage sunk was said to be 43,000. A British destroyer was reported set afire and another badly damaged.)

Heroic stories of soldiers and seamen gallantly facing death were told today by survivors of the Lancastria.

Those who could not be saved went down with a cheer for rescued comrades taken off by lifeboats, one steward said.

"Gunners stood by their arms until water swirled them away, but before they died they accounted for at least one if not all the attacking ships," he said.

"The commander, Capt. Arthur Robert Sharp, refused to leave the bridge. But the ship's surgeon,

'I Am' Leaders Live in Great Luxury, Ballard's Wife Reveals

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 25.—A word picture of the woman cofounder of the "I Am" cult living in a $1,000-a-month hotel suite, adorned in glittering diamond "love gifts," wearing two orchid corsages daily, each costing $50, was drawn today by blonde Marjorie Ballard.

Mrs. Ballard is the estranged wife of Donald Ballard and the daughter-in-law of Mrs. Edna Ballard, both of whom were among 24 "I Am" leaders indicted by a Federal grand jury on charges of misusing the mails and conspiracy to obtain gifts by promising followers immortality.

Donald Ballard became president of the movement after the death of his father, Guy Ballard.

Mrs. Edna Ballard and her son, Donald Ballard, surrendered today.

On motion of their attorney, United States District Judge Leon R. Yankwich reduced their bail from $10,000 to $5,000 each. They posted bonds in that amount and were released after being fingerprinted.

"I thank the United States Government for indicting us," the gray-haired Mrs. Ballard, dressed in white and carrying a bouquet of white roses and a white hand bag, said.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

ON THE TRAIN WITH HENRY.

I found Henry Wallace in the next car of the train fleeing from the convention which had nominated him for Vice President. He wasn't any easier to talk with than when he was editing his farm paper in my home town of Des Moines—nor any harder.

Harlan Miller

"When did you know they were going to nominate you?" I asked, after the necessary preliminaries. You'd no more dive right in with what was on your mind with Henry than with a farmer in the barnyard.

"At 12:07 a. m., Chicago time," said Mr. Wallace. That was the moment when Senator Barkley announced the vote.

"Can they persuade Jim Farley to help campaign?"

He looked out the window at a cornfield whizzing past, with a little frown.

"I'm worried about that corn," he said. "It isn't tassling right. It should tassle by July 18, and it's already several days late."

* * * *

Henry was traveling alone, and not hidden in a stateroom, and people kept stopping by to congratulate him. "I recognized you from your pictures," they'd say. A conductor and a brakeman told him the railroad men were for him 1,000 per cent. A dentist named Hutchnecker offered to do some dental work for him. He doesn't need any.

"—even on book larnin'—"

An intelligent young man sat down. Soon they were going over proofs of a review of a book Mr. Wallace had written for the September issue of the Political Science Quarterly. The young man turned out to be Mr. Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review of Literature. They discussed Veblen's "Imperial Germany and the Industrial Revolution."

* * * *

The well-wishers thinned out and I asked the Secretary another question vaguely political. It involved Mr. Willkie in a roundabout way.

"Recognize that dodder out in that field?" asked Mr. Wallace.

"Dodder?" I asked. "Did you say dodder, d-o-d-d-e-r?"

* * * *

"Yes. Dodder," he said. "See that yellow plant sorta growing ober the other plants in that field?" I saw the faint golden tracery clinging like cobwebs.

"I see it. But what is it?"

"That's dodder, a parasite that lives on other plants," said Mr. Wallace. "Hasn't any roots in the ground. Something like a utilities holding company."

On second thought, that one is worthy of Abe Lincoln.

A stalwart, well-groomed young man with glasses sidled up.

"If I'm not intruding, Mr. Wallace," he began, and looked a little embarrassed.

"Not at all. Shoot."

"I'm on the Daily Princetonian," he said. "Could you give us a sort of statement about student participation in international affairs?"

"—in dad's & grand-dad's footsteps"

Henry meditated on that one a moment. He grinned a little.

"Glad to have you participate," he said. "But it's a little out of my department. Maybe you'd better ask Mr. Hull."

"We don't want to march off and get shot," said the young Princetonian apologetically, "without having a word to say about it."

I zig-zagged to the end of the car for a drink, and ran into the intelligent young editor of the Saturday Review. He was headed toward a couple of lectures at a State university summer session.

"Look," he said. "Willkie's got nothing on Wallace when it comes to reading. Wallace seems to have read every book I could think of. And he's no slouch as a writer. Get him to show you his piece on Veblen."

* * * *

Two seasoned reporters had found Henry and were asking about his campaign. He'd see the President before he made any decisions.

"How'd you like to enroll in the Senator Lister Hill School of Oratory?" I asked. Mr. Wallace looked a little wistful. He seems to float away from his audiences like Siegfried in his swan boat.

I cajoled him into letting me see the proof of his article. My eye fell on a phrase in which he referred to himself: "As a geneticist —". The reporters were asking him about his sons. They weren't at the convention? No.

* * * *

One was just finishing a summer course at Iowa State.

Bio-physics. Effects of diet on animals, with heredity and training. The other boy was on Henry's farm near Johnson Station.

"Following in dad's footsteps, eh?" commented one of them.

"And grand-dad's, too," said the other.

* * * *

It seemed slightly incongruous when someone asked him about the booing at the convention.

He wouldn't discuss it. Knew where it came from and who arranged it.

"Too bad it sounded to the radio audience as if the delegates and everyone were booing," said someone who had been there. "It was only that gang over at the left."

"It didn't matter," said Henry. "People have to cut loose some time."

Mr. Wallace, after all, is a geneticist at heart.

Judge Patterson Succeeds Johnson

Republican Takes Post Resigned By Stimson Aide

Louis Johnson, wheel-horse of the defense program, yesterday resigned as Assistant Secretary of War to make way for a friend and fellow Republican of Secretary of War Stimson, Federal Circuit Judge Robert P. Patterson, of New York.

The White House, in announcing Johnson's resignation and the nomination of Judge Patterson, said the action was taken at Stimson's request in accordance with the "time immemorial" custom of permitting Cabinet officers to select their assistants.

Immediately, Mr. Roosevelt offered Col. Johnson a post as administrative assistant at the White House to be his "eyes and ears" on the continuing progress of the entire national defense program."

Johnson's letter of resignation and the President's acceptance of it were made public at the White House shortly after Judge Patterson's nomination was sent to the Senate. In his letter, Johnson disclosed he had first offered his resignation when Secretary Stimson was appointed to succeed Harry H. Woodring, and added:

"I then understood you desired that I remain. I am now informed that Mr. Stimson had already made different plans. . . . It is with keen regret, therefore, that I tender my resignation again. I have no alternative."

There was no immediate indication whether Johnson would accept the tendered White House post. In his letter of resignation, he said he was returning to his law firm, and as he left immediately thereafter for a vacation at Bohemian Grove near San Francisco, he was not available for comment.

If confirmed by the Senate, as is expected, Judge Patterson will be not only "promoted" to the second ranking Army post, but at the same time "demoted" from a $12,000 a year life term on the bench to a $10,000 temporary job here.

Johnson, who has been charged with all Army procurement and industrial mobilization plans, told President Roosevelt in his letter that the "monumental" arms expansion task was rendered less arduous by the consciousness that in all essential principles of the national defense program you and I saw eye to eye."

The West Virginia Democrat, a former national commander of the American Legion, was named Assistant Secretary of War in 1937. Secretary Woodring and Johnson never got along, and for a time rarely spoke to each other. Woodring opposed the President's aid-the-Allies policies, and his letter of resignation, reputedly sharply critical of the sale of Army planes to Great Britain, was never made public.

President Roosevelt's telegram, accepting Johnson's resignation, praised the West Virginian highly for his "splendid services" to the cause of national defense.

"Regretfully, therefore," the President added, "I accept your resignation as the Assistant Secretary of War, as of this date, because the Secretary of War has asked me to send to the Senate the nomination of Mr. Robert Patterson as your successor."

Judge Patterson, 49, was appointed a Federal judge by President Hoover in 1930 and elevated to the Second District Circuit Court of Appeals by President Roosevelt last year.

A resident of Garrison, N. Y., he is married and has four children. He served as a captain and major in France in the same division with Col. Stimson, and received the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in destroying an enemy outpost in a daylight raid.

Political Arena

New York, July 25 (AP).—Former Representative John J. O'Connor, New Deal election "purge" victim, said today he had sent letters to 2,000 leading Democrats urging them to organize to defeat President Roosevelt and to "work for the election of a better Democrat and safer American," Wendell L. Willkie.

O'CONNOR

O'Connor, who was chairman of the House Rules Committee at the time of his defeat in 1936, said in his letter that he believed "90 per cent of the delegates" at the Democratic Convention "left Chicago disgusted" because of "the obvious objection of a majority of them to a third term. . . . The dictated nomination of a radical and a Republican for Vice President," and "the humiliating treatment accorded" James A. Farley, national chairman.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, replied in the House yesterday to a recent press conference comment by Mr. Roosevelt that the minds of Lewis Douglas and John W. Hanes, former Federal officials who are supporting Wendell Willkie, ran more to dollars than humanity.

"Could any meaner thing be said by one about another?" Taber asked.

Kansas City, July 25.—James A. Reed, former Democratic Senator from Missouri, replied to President Roosevelt's remark that Reed had forsaken the Democratic Party in 1936 and in 1932 and probably in 1928, by displaying a letter addressed to "My dear friend Jim" in which, he said, the President thanked him for aid in the 1932 campaign.

Boston, July 25 (AP).—United States Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Republican), Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, filed papers with Secretary of State Frederic W. Refugee Ship Plans Backed By First Lady

Mrs. Roosevelt Favors Sending of Vessels For British Children

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt yesterday recorded her approval of proposals to bring English children to America in American ships.

In a message read to the House Foreign Affairs Committee by Representative Hennings (Democrat), of Missouri, Mrs. Roosevelt said: "I am very glad to have you quote me as saying that if it can be made possible to bring children here in safety in American ships, I am in favor of doing so. I deeply appreciate your efforts on behalf of these children."

The hearings were on two bills by Representatives Celler (Democrat), of New York, and Hennings to amend the neutrality law by permitting the use of American ships to evacuate the youthful refugees.

Doubts Raised About Methods

Unanimous agreement with the spirit behind the bills was expressed at the committee hearings by witnesses and members alike. But Representatives Bloom and Fish, of New York, chairman and ranking minority member of the committee, raised doubts as to the best methods of bringing the children to this country.

Quoting Prime Minister Churchill that the removal of the children would be "most undesirable," Representative Fish asked "how can we directly legislate against this official word" of the British government?

But at least two of the witnesses—Marshall Field, president of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, and Mrs. Marion Sanders, of the "Mercy Ships for Children" committee, declared it to be their understanding that the refugee movement had official British approval.

And Barry Bingham, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal and son of Robert Worth Bingham, late Ambassador to Great Britain, said he would privately attempt to learn exactly what Churchill's views are—and would inform the committee.

Bingham testified that British veterans of the Flanders campaign had written him that they wanted their children to get out of reach of German destruction, after seeing what had happened to the children of Belgium and northern France in the Hitler blitzkrieg.

Kennedy's Opposition Denied

A new report that Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to Great Britain, opposed sending American ships for the children was branded untrue by Field.

The witness told the committee that Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, has "categorically denied that Kennedy said anything of the kind."

Both the Hennings and Cellar bills provide that the American ships can be sent only if safe-conducts are obtained from the belligerent nations—but several witnesses denounced this provision.

"Don't ask for a safe conduct—demand it," said G. M. Edgley, of Dallas, Tex., chairman of the local refugee children committee. Declaring that he didn't see how the United States could be involved, he went on to say that "if we should be involved, I think the vast majority of Americans would say, 'So be it.'"

And Emmett White, of Baltimore, urged the committee not to ask permission "of the German or any other government." He added that "the American way is to decide on a course and go ahead and do it."

The committee may report out one of the bills this morning.

Poison Ivy May Furnish Clew In Attack Case

Alexandria police are counting on the effects of poison ivy to help them identify a colored suspect who is being held by Wilmington, Del., authorities in connection with an attempted assault on a 21-year-old white woman in Alexandria ten days ago.

The young woman broke out in a poison ivy rash soon after the attack and three members of the Alexandria detective bureau who visited the scene of the assault, complained of a similar affliction within a few days. Unless the attacker is immune, said Detecitve Russell Hawes, he should have ivy poisoning.

Detective Hawes and the woman will go to Wilmington today in an effort to identify the suspect. The suspect has been tentatively identified by his victim through a photograph.

Gerard Sees U. S. At War in 6 Months

Butte, Mont., July 25 (AP).—James W. Gerard, American Ambassador to Germany in 1917, said today the United States would be "at war within six months—somehow, somewhere."

The New Yorker, here with his wife to visit friends, said in an interview that whether the war "will be in the east, south or west, I don't know, but we will be at war."

Heat Brings Out Crabs, Md. Fleets Hoist Sails

Princess Anne, Md., July 25 (AP).—Somerset County watermen, disheartened by the continued scarcity of the Chesapeake Bay blue crab, were encouraged today by word from Smith Island that crabs were increasing in the waters around the island.

The crab fleets of Deal Island and Fairmount hoisted sail again when the news was received from Smith Island. The appearance of increasingly large numbers of crabs there was believed due to the hot weather of the past week.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., July 25.—The present strength of Wendell Willkie, far from being a mere accident of politics, is part of a basic trend in American public thinking—a trend which began as far back as 1937. That trend is toward greater acceptance of the leadership of big businessmen in national affairs, and it represents a fundamental change in the sentiment toward business which was current in the early days of the New Deal. Nowhere is the change more clearly revealed than in a Nation-wide survey just completed by the Institute.

DR. GALLUP

The survey shows that there is comparatively little sentiment left in the Nation for greater regulation of business in the interests of reform. That fact may have an important bearing on the Presidential campaign, particularly in connection with attacks on Willkie as a representative of big business. It indicates that New Deal broadsides against business which proved effective in the campaigns of 1932 and 1936 may be less effective in 1940.

Two Issues Probed

The survey probed opinions on two issues—regulation of business and regulation of labor unions. A cross-section of voters in all areas and income levels were asked:

"During the next four years do you think business should be regulated to a greater extent by the Federal Government?

Those expressing an opinion voted as follows:

Yes	33%
No	67

Approximately one voter in six (17 per cent) had no opinion.

The second question was:

"Do you think labor unions should be regulated to a greater extent by the Federal Government?"

On this question those expressing an opinion voted:

Yes	75%
No	25

Roughly one person in five (18 per cent) expressed no opinion.

Depends on Incomes

The results indicate that more than twice as many voters favor greater regulation of labor as favor greater regulation of business. Attitudes toward the subject vary sharply, however, by income groups. About half of voters in the lower income brackets are for greater regulaiton of business, as compared to less than one-fifth in the upper income group. However, all economic groups—even those made up predominately of skilled and unskilled labor—are in favor of greater union regulation.

The results do not necessarily mean, however, that the public would oppose wartime regulations of business, or special restrictions connected with military rearmament. What today's poll attempted to measure was simply the public's basic attitude toward general business regulation for reform.

"Gone Far Enough"

The chief reason why the majority oppose further industrial regulation, the poll shows, is that the Government has "already gone far enough" and that further regulation would be "too much like dictatorship." Those are the reasons given by voters themselves.

On the question of regulating labor unions, the general attitude expressed in the comments of voters is that "unions are too powerful and have gone too far," that many unions have become "rackets," and that regulation is needed to protect union members from "unscrupulous leaders in their own ranks."

Bloc Kills Plan for USHA Defense Grant

Scheme Would Have Given $250,000,000 For Workers' Homes

An effort to grant the United States Housing Authority $250,000,000 in additional lending power for national defense purposes was killed in a brief but effective behind-the-scenes revolt in the House yesterday.

The housing proposal, part of a bill reported by the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday authorizing new shore establishments, would have permitted the USHA to make loans up to $250,000,000 to assure living quarters "for persons engaged in national defense activities."

But when Representative Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee, and other members of the anti-USHA bloc heard about the scheme, they warned Chairman Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee that it would mean a serious fight when the entire measure reaches the floor of the House Monday.

However, the threatened row will be averted, as Representative Vinson yesterday decided to offer a new proposal for whatever public housing is necessitated by the expanded shore construction program.

He declared that he will put forward as a substitute for the USHA plan an amendment authorizing the President to order construction of $25,000,000 in housing—one-tenth of the original sum—when "the expeditious prosecution of the naval shipbuilding program" requires it.

This plan would have the effect of placing housing construction under the Navy Department directly instead of under the USHA, Representative Vinson said. He added that the amount of the grant had been cut "in the hope that private industry will build the houses instead of the Government—but if industry doesn't, the Government will have to step in."

The bill, with its substitute housing plan, is expected to pass the House Monday without trouble, Representative Vinson said.

Roosevelt Gets Plan to Aid 'Okies'

4,000,000 Migrant Workers Object Of U. S. Program

By Edward Ryan

A proposed Federal program to aid an estimated 4,000,000 American "nomad" laborers has been given to President Roosevelt by his interdepartmental committee to coordinate Government health and welfare activities, it was announced yesterday.

The report, a summary of national migratory labor problems similar to those described in Steinbeck's novel, "The Grapes of Wrath," was prepared at the President's request and published on his approval.

Their program, the committee said, would require "much closer" cooperation between Federal and State agencies now dealing with migrant workers.

None of their proposals, they said, "is a solution for the basic problem of unemployment."

No Jobless Cure

"No relief, public works program, or other device for merely tiding over unemployment, offers a permanent answer to this challenge," they said. "There is no substitute for full-time jobs in private industry at adequate wages."

Their recommendations, the committee said, were aimed at "immediate and urgently needed remedies for present conditions among migratory workers." The proposed remedies included:

1. A series of State-Federal regional conferences to promote public understanding of the migratory labor problem, along with speedy collection and study of facts about migrants by Federal and State agencies.

2. Federal aid for educational, recreational and welfare services to communities with the problem of the migratory worker. This aid, the committee said, should be given on condition that the welfare services be given to migrants on the same basis as residents.

3. Expansion of the Farm Security Administration's camps for migratory agricultural workers, and Federal provision for permanent garden homestead for migrants who land year-around jobs on nearby farms.

4. A Federal-State program, backed by an initial $5,000,000 appropriation under the Social Security Act for the current fiscal year, to provide health and medical services for migrants.

5. Closer Federal supervision of migratory working conditions through Federal regulation of interstate labor contractors; Interstate Commerce Commission regulation over transporting workers across State lines by truck; expansion of the farm placement service; extending wage-hour coverage to agricultural migrants; protection for children of migratory workers against too-youthful employment; extension of the social security programs, including public assistance, old-age insurance and unemployment insurance to migrants.

Federal-State Program

6. A general Federal-State relief program, with Federal funds given on a "variable grants" basis to give poorer States a larger proportion of aid, and safeguards to prevent discrimination against migratory workers.

7. Insuring for migratory workers "the civil rights to which all citizens are entitled."

The committee said that an estimated 2,000,000 migratory workers look to agriculture for a living, and "at least as many to industry." The migrant army, formerly recruited mostly from immigrant groups, "is now filled largely by native-born Americans," they said.

More than half of the 48 States are affected by the migrant problem, the report said, adding that the misfortunes of the migrants "create grave problems for every community into which they come." Causes of the migrant problem are deeply rooted in "long-term social and economic forces," and "would not be wholly solved even if the entire country were to achieve capacity levels of employment and production," they said.

Defense Sidelights

Ford Company Denies U. S. Offered It Plane Engine Order

Cameron Asserts Firm Never Refused To Build Planes for America and England; Charges Administration Lacks Definite Goal

San Francisco, July 25.—"The Administration has no idea what it wants manufactured," W. C. Cameron, spokesman for the Ford Motor Co., declared today in denying the Ford company ever had refused to manufacture airplane engines in a joint order for the United States and Britain at the request of the National Defense Council.

CAMERON

"No contract ever was offered us," Cameron asserted. "The reported contract for manufacture of Rolls-Royce airplane engines was not closer than three months away."

(The defense commission has asserted the Ford company was offered a contract for 9,000 airplane engines, of which 3,000 would be for this country and 6,000 for Britain.)

Cameron was in San Francisco to attend Ford Day at the Golden Gate Exposition with Edsel Ford.

Fast Work for Navy

Kearny, N. J., July 25 (AP).—The Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. reported today an acceleration of its production schedule in line with national defense policy had made possible the delivery this month of a destroyer, two tankers and a cargo vessel "all substantially ahead of contract stipulations."

The destroyer, the 1,630-ton U. S. S. Plunkett, was delivered in 23 months, seven months ahead of the contract delivery date.

Army Life's Like This

If you find that "you're in the Army now" a few months hence under the yet-to-be-enacted compulsory military training law, the War Department says your year of training will be something like this:

First two months—Introduction to Army life and basic military instruction.

Next eight months—Specialist training, with the men expected to drop into branches of the service to which they are adapted or prefer; unit training, with emphasis on functions as a combat team.

Next month and a half—Training to develop the practical application of the previous instruction, with field exercises and maneuvers.

Last two weeks—"Deprocessing," which would include assignment to National Guard units, for instance, and preparations to return home.

Island a Fortress

New York, July 25 (AP).—William D. Leahy, Governor of Puerto Rico, said today that plans to convert the island into a defensive stronghold were "well under way" and that "no nation will dare to attack the eastern United States or the Panama Canal while Puerto Rico bristles with guns and fortifications."

He broadcast from San Juan in celebration of Puerto Rico Day at the New York World's Fair.

Roosevelt Acts To Bar Scrap, Oil to Axis

Virtual Embargo Will Also Cover Shipments to Asia

President Roosevelt yesterday established means for keeping American oil and scrap metal from the warring aggressors of Europe and Asia.

By executive order he added petroleum and petroleum products, scrap iron and other scrap metal to the commodities subject to the system of export licenses created on July 2 for control of exports of munitions, materials and machinery needed for defense.

The action was taken shortly after it became known that the United States already has stopped two shipments of oil, consigned to a Spanish port but believed intended for Germany and Italy.

Two tankers, the Aryan and the Nevada, were refused clearance from a Texas port, the Maritime Commission revealed, until their cargoes, aggregating about 200,000 barrels of oil, were unloaded. It was made clear in official circles that a virtual embargo is in effect against sending of American oil to the Axis powers.

The tankers were stopped July 10 and 11 at Houston, Tex., by the "Office of Merchant Ship Movements," set up by President Roosevelt recently under Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to supervise activities of both foreign and domestic ships.

Secretary Morgenthau, confirming the stoppages, declined to go into details, but said there was no connection between them and the efforts of Great Britain to keep oil from getting to the Axis powers through Spain.

President Roosevelt, in his July 2 order, listed several dozen articles and materials to be subjected to export licenses, applications for which would be passed on by the State Department. He appointed Lieut. Col. Rpssell L. Maxwell to be administrator of export control, and provided that the list of articles and materials might be added to upon Maxwell's recommendations.

No embargo actually is created, but licenses for shipments of any of the commodities on the list may be refused.

The Maritime Commission also disclosed it had refused to sanction chartering of seven ships of United States registry to Japanese companies for transport of oil and scrap iron to Japan.

At the same time the commission approved charter of 15 American ships for transport of oil and other materials between United States, Canadian, West Indian and Russian ports.

Japan last year bought more than 16,000,000 barrels of petroleum, 1,000,000 barrels of gasoline and over 2,000,000 tons of scrap iron from this country.

Maritime Commission officials similarly confirmed that agency's denial, June 10, of an application by the Cities Service Co., for sale of two of its tankers, first to the Spanish Petroleum Monopoly and, alternatively, to Mitsui & Co., Japanese trading house.

A commission official said discountenancing of the sale and transfer of the tankers to alien registry were ordered "in the public interest."

American organizations supporting China's fight for survival have long agitated for an anti-Japanese embargo, contending that continued shipments of American supplies made the United States Japan's economic ally in its attempted conquest of China.

Jobs Guarantee Put in Draft Bill

steps this time in time of peace, instead of running around after trouble starts getting a staff," he added.

Chief practical effect of the step a this time, however, Marshall emphasized, is the decentralization of control of training operations from the War Department to the field. The headquarters will have jurisdiction of all mobile troops and harbor defenses in continental United States, including general headquarters, aviation and the new armored force.

Brig. Gen. Lesley J. McNair will be chief of staff of the new headquarters, while Marshall, himself, under long-standing regulations is commander of all the field forces.

As the Senate Military Committee was redrafting the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, vigorous opposition to the measure broke out on the Senate floor.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, declared the draft measure was part of "hysteria" which is leading the United States "down the road to war." Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, also attacked the conscription proposal, shouting that if it is passed "nothing is left except to pull the trigger."

Sees No Emergency

"The American people will never stand it," Wheeler said. "No peacetime conscription plank could have been put across at the Democratic convention. We shouldn't be stampeded into this

"I don't believe we're in any emergency. The only emergency is that conjured up in the minds of a few people who want to see us go to war and send our youths to Asia or Europe."

Vandenberg declared he wouldn't "be rushed into conscription unless men can't be provided on a voluntary basis" and predicted a million men would volunteer if the War Department would substitute one-year enlistments for the three-year term now in effect.

The House Military Affairs Committee continued public hearings on the draft proposal throughout the day, hearing a number of opponents and a War Department witness who estimated the cost of the program.

Maj. George L. Eberle said the cost of mobilizing the National Guard, and drafting 400,000 men in October and a like number in April, would total about $1,100,000,000 during the current fiscal year. About 25 per cent of this cost would be construction of barracks and other items which would be non-recurring in succeeding years.

Provide for Objectors

The Senate committee also wrote into the pending bill a broad exemption from combatant service for conscientious objectors, a proviso asked by several witnesses before the House committee during the day.

The provision, drafted by War Department officials and representatives of religious orders whose members are forbidden to engage in military duties, provides for a special register of conscientious objectors. The Department of Justice would arrange hearings before local boards to determine the good faith of the objection.

They could classify objectors into two groups, those opposed to combatant service who would be assigned to noncombatant service and those opposed to participation in war in any capacity, who would be given work under civilian direction. Appeal boards are provided for review of disputed cases.

Adoption of suchc exemption was urged to the House committee by Dr. C. S. Longacre, of Takoma Park, Md., representing the Seventh Day Adventists. He also proposed the bill be amended to authorize members of faiths whose Sabbath is other than Sunday to be excused from all duties "that can be dispensed with" on that day.

Howard K. Beall, University of North Carolina professor, representative of the American Civil Liberties Union, and Paul Comly French and Raymond E. Wilson, both of Philadelphia, members of the Religious Society of Friends, proposed broadening the conscientious objector provision still further to exempt men who object to any service in war.

Under the exemption adopted by the Senate committee, which probably will be agreed to by the House group, any conscientious objector could be exempted and not just members of religious orders which bar military service, as during the World War.

Benjamin Marsh of the People's Lobby, Mrs. Emily L. Eaton of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, and the Rev. Amos S. Horst of the Mennonite Church of Akron, Pa., appeared in opposition to the bill. Marsh clashed repeatedly with committeemen as he criticized the bill as "Hitler's first victory in America." He drew laughter and applause from spectators as he proposed that all Congressmen resign their $10,000 a year jobs for the $21 a month conscription billets.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland, told the committee many National Guardsmen were apprehensive that Congress might deny funds for support of the Guard in later years if a large body of trained reserves is created. He asked an amendment making maintenance and call of the Guard mandatory.

Another amendment approved by the Senate committee bars bounties or substitutes in the draft, the use of which caused riots during Civil War days.

Joining Senators Wheeler and Vandenberg in their opposition to conscription, Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, made public a letter to a constituent, in which he declared years of compulsory military training would change American ideals and make rising generations venerate militarism.

Britain to Pay For New U. S. Plane Plants

America Plans 3,000 Aircraft a Month Production for England

By the Associated Press

The British have decided, Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday, to pour "colossal" sums into the American airplane industry, building factories which will expand the industry's capacity "far beyond" 50,000 planes a year.

On its part, the United States has pledged "every facility," Morgenthau said, to enable the British to buy 3,000 planes a month here in addition to large orders already placed. Officials declined to estimate how soon such a production level might be reached, merely confining themselves to saying the British honed it would be attained early in 1941.

A spokesman for the aviation industry privately expressed confidence that the industry could produce 3,000 planes a month, if the British furnished the money and assured the necessary supply of machine tools.

He added, however, that present capacity for manufacture of military planes is only 1,250 a month and that the industry is working at less than 50 per cent of capacity. With extensive enlargements already under way, particularly in West Coast factories, he added, the industry could produce 22,000 to 24,000 warplanes a year by fall.

Up to now, it was authoritatively estimated, the British have ordered approximately 11,000 war planes of all types in this country, of which approximately 2,800 have been delivered.

The total of orders includes contracts made as long ago as January 1 of last year, and uncompleted contracts taken over from the French last month after France's armistice with Germany.

[A New York Times copyright dispatch said that at $100,000 per plane, with engine, which it said probably is within $25,000 of what the British will have to pay, the total cost of the two years of the new program, 1941 and 1942, would exceed $7,000,000,000.—Editor's note.]

Morgenthau made his announcement after officials here had conferred for two days with British representatives.

Concrete Fort Built in Five Hours

29 inches from the top of the balloon and 3 feet from the bottom. The concrete was poured and pressure was applied. A suction pump drew out the excess water and presto—a "pillbox."

The balloon was then deflated and drawn out from an entrance below ground level, approached by a deep trench.

Although there was no comment forthcoming from the Army and Congressional observers, it was evident that all who watched were impressed by the demonstration. The entire affair from the time ground was broken until the "pillbox" emerged into its own, took barely five hours.

Fort Houses Six Men

The fortress could house six men in comfort. There are three gun openings and Billner informed his guests that it would withstand heavy bombardment immediately upon completion.

Senators Reynolds, Shepherd and Guffey were among those who watched the demonstration.

British Support Reported Given Dobruja Claim

'Always Inclined' To Back Bulgaria, London Source Says

By the Associated Press

London, July 25. — Informed sources indicated tonight Britain sympathizes with Bulgaria's claim to part of the southern Rumanian province of Dobruja, formerly Bulgaria's.

This source declared the British government "always has been favorably inclined to Bulgaria's claim" but treaties with Rumania "made any British support awkward."

It was pointed out that if Bulgaria got Dobruja with British support it would bolster Britain's position near the Dardanelles.

[Return of Dobruja to Bulgaria would increase the Bulgarian shore on the Black Sea, which the heavily fortified Turkish Dardanelles links with the Mediterranean.]

Bulgaria Supported by Russia

The British source said Turkey's trade agreement recently reached with Germany does not alter Anglo-Turkish relations and added:

"Whatever steps Turkey has taken, of course, have been in consultation with Britain."

Bulgaria has been supported in her Dobrujan claim by Russia and the British nod of approval to the claim was interpreted in some circles as possibly strengthening Britain's own relations with the Soviet.

If Bulgarians had Dobruja, Bulgaria and Russia would have Rumania completely blocked from the Black Sea and would jointly control the mouth of the important Danube route through which supplies can pass to Germany.

Earlier in the day Rumania recalled her pro-British Minister to London, Viorel Virgil Tilea.

Bucharest, July 25 (AP).—Rumania's potent Iron Guard handed King Carol a memorandum today expressing uncompromising opposition to any territorial concessions to Hungary and Bulgaria at tomorrow's conference of Rumanian and German officials at Salzburg.

The Iron Guardists said the Rumanian people would fight rather than surrender any part of Transylvania to Hungary or Southern Dobruja to Bulgaria.

Many Rumanians fear Germany might dictate changes in their border "to stabilize southeastern Europe."

The Iron Guardists, though supported and harbored by German Nazis, are the most nationalistic group in this recent Nazified country.

Tightens Hold on Oil

Meanwhile, Rumania tightened her grip on vast British and French oil properties tonight by ordering expulsion of 12 French oil company executives and promising greatly speeded deliveries for the Reich.

The government order came amid reports that at least 22 oil company executives would be expelled, including additional British. Earlier this month 30 other British oilmen and their families were ousted and only yesterday Rumania seized the country's largest oil enterprise, the $15,000,000 Astra-Romana Co.

Germany Warns U. S. on Trade

her idea of forcing her economic conditions upon Germany or Europe. To conduct trade with South American States, we do not need North American mediation. Either economic exchange between Germany and South America is based on free, untrammeled arrangement or it will not take place at all."

Complaining that the United States is deliberately discriminating against Germany, he said the United States' cartel plan in "reality" is a proposed "bilateral economic system" such as Germany is using in her barter.

"Why then is Germany to be excluded?" he asked.

Adding that "to what extent we conduct trade with the United States depends absolutely upon Americans themselves," he said that as long as "calumny is heaped on German products such trade is of course problematical."

Referring to United States objection to barter arrangements, he continued: "So long as the United States clings to dogma, which after all is mere dogma and no longer has a foundation in business practice itself, trade with the United States naturally will continue to encounter difficulties."

If the United States "desires to contribute to reestablish continuity in world commerce, they must abandon the wrong method of wanting at the same time to be both the greatest creditor nation and the greatest export country," he declared.

Funk said he in no wise wanted gold eliminated as a means of equalizing balances, but he was certain it would not play any role as a foundation for European exchange.

"Exchange is not dependent upon its (gold) coverage but upon the value assigned to it by the state," he explained.

Germany's post-war reichsmark, dominating the currency of Europe, will not fluctuate according to the "abandoned principle of free interplay of forces," he said, "and Germany's emergence from the war as the leading power would give her marks a greater value.

He suggested that Germany might abandon one device by making all her marks of the same value instead of differeing values now used in foreign trade.

Going more into detail about a German-dominated Europe, Funk said there will continue to be different price levels since different living standards will obtain.

Currencies will differ in value, but will be adjusted to Germany's.

Germany expects to employ the same economic policies which made possible "our great economic success before the war," but the bilateral trade arrangements already in effect may be used only as starting arrangements for multilateral systems, with a central clearing house taking care of equalizing balances.

Each country is to develop its own economic resources and conduct trade with other countries, but the principles and methods must on the whole be identical.

Europe, and especially Germany, will wish to draw upon overseas raw materials in great quantities, he predicted, and will want to pay for them with manufactured goods.

But Europe must always be self sufficient in event of war, he said, and consequently the development of synthetic products will continue.

Declaring only the British blockade was hindering German foreign trade, he said he expected German exchange with South America and the Orient would flourish after the war.

Statesmen of southeastern Europe meanwhile were en route or preparing to travel to Germany to learn the part their countries will play on the German-dominated continent.

Rumania's premier and foreign minister will talk with Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop at Salzburg tomorrow "to have their new political course acknowledged" by the Axis powers, later proceeding to Rome to see Premier Mussolini and his foreign minister. Bulgaria's premier and foreign minister will see Ribbentrop Saturday, and the premier and foreign minister of Slovakia are expected to see him Sunday.

Germany's ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, is en route to Berlin for what informed quarters here call a routine report.

[A dispatch from Istanbul said Von Papen's departure was "unexpected" and that political circles saw significance in the fact that he would arrive during the week-end of southeastern European talks.]

New Theater of Plot and Intrigue

Nazis Seen Stirring Up Trouble Between Portugal and Spain

By James B. Reston.

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 25.—Germany is now trying for her own ends to stir up trouble between Portugal and Spain, reliable diplomatic reports reaching London indicated today.

For centuries a number of Spanish patriots have insisted that Spain should encompass the entire Iberian peninsula by regaining Gibraltar from Britain as they regained it from the Moors in the fourteenth century, and by incorporating Portugal into a new greater Spain.

Since the end of the Spanish War, the Germans have encouraged certain members of the Spanish Falange Party who have held this view, and since the collapse of France this campaign has definitely increased in an effort to appeal to those Spaniards who hope that in the coming reconstruction of Europe Spain may return to her ancient glory.

Germany, however, appears to have other and more immediate objects. Portugal owns a few islands in the Atlantic which are of particular interest to the Nazis. These are Madeira and the Azores, which happen to lie well out along Britain's famous oil route from Venezuela.

The importance of this oil route helps to explain this new German campaign. In 1936, for example, which was a normal year, Britain imported 1,112,000,000 gallons of oil from Venezuela and the nearby Dutch West Indies. This alone was 38 per cent of Britain's entire imports of oil and more than half again what she imported from any other country.

Since last September, when the R. A. F. and the royal navy began to eat up oil, imports from across the Atlantic naturally increased, and in recent weeks events have tended to increase the importance of the route from South America.

Signs in French Banned in Alsace

Copyright by New York Times

Strasbourg, via Berlin, July 25.—The German chief of police has decreed that "in view of the reintroduction of the mother tongue in Alsace," French language signs must be removed and substituted by German signs. The decree applies also to signs in all languages other than German. Shopowners are instructed to obey the order immediately.

Exile to Become Alsace Governor

Basel, July 25 (AP).—Dr. Robert Ernst, Alsatian leader who lived in exile in Berlin since 1918 and directed the Alsatian Nazi movement from there, has returned to Strasbourg, reports reaching the Swiss frontier said today.

Ernst soon will be appointed to succeed Robert Wagner as governor of Alsace-Lorraine, these reports said.

British Maid 'Humane' To German Airman

London, July 25 (AP).—A British housemaid today captured a stunned German aviator, revived him with a glass of whisky, and handed him over to the home guard.

The aviator was one of three, all captured, who parachuted from a German plane shot down by the British near a southwestern village. One was killed when his 'chute failed to open.

Britain Lets Aliens Flee Night Air Raids

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, July 25.—Aliens in Great Britain will now be allowed to leave their homes at night to take shelter during air raids, Home Secretary Sir John Anderson announced today.

Aliens have had to observe a curfew beginning at midnight in cities and at 10:30 in the country. Until Anderson made the announcement today they were technically not allowed to leave their homes for shelters outside. There have been cases of prosecution by the police of individual aliens running to public shelters to escape the bombs.

France to Discourage Women in Business

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, July 25.—French women under the new regime will doubtless be discouraged from entering business and will be turned toward family pursuits. This policy arises from the prospects of unemployment among men and the importance of repopulation.

A writer in Figaro says today that young women should not seek any profession other than that of wife, mother and housekeeper.

Argentina Balks At Colonies Plan

conference considered the desirability of a broader system of trade cooperation.

The Argentine delegation prepared four proposals for the conference. These embraced foreign possessions, inter-American neutrality and the security zone, protection of children, coordination of defense measures.

In proposing only a broad outline of economic steps to meet existing and future emergencies, the United States was understood to have recognized the difficulty of working out full details at a conference of this character.

Some of these measures, it is understood, will require extended and detailed negotiations among individual governments in respect to specific commodities.

The United States delegation was understood to be privately placing details of its economic plans before various delegations so they could take them back to their governments to hasten agreement.

These were believed to call for some plan similar to a cartel developed in preliminary form by a cabinet committee under the direction of President Roosevelt to deal with the export of surpluses.

Cooperative Body Envisioned

This envisaged a cooperative American body to which the republics would contribute financially. The body would acquire surpluses and direct their disposition to prevent any country from gaining unfair advantages through barter deals.

Some opposition already was reported from some United States farm sections, where it was feared such a plan might lower the barriers against products from other countries in competition with their own.

Uruguay offered a proposal to extend the zones of territorial waters for all American nations to 25 miles from their coasts instead of the present ranges of from 3 to 12 miles. The plan was advanced in recognition of the fact the so-called "security zone" now in effect is merely temporary.

The settlement in American nations of refugee children from European war areas was another subject called up for study.

Hitler Takes Time Off to Commune With the Muses

Berlin, July 25 (AP).—Fuehrer Hitler took off a few days from war and diplomacy this week to visit the theater and patronize the arts, it was disclosed tonight.

Unannounced, the Fuehrer took his short rest from official duties shortly after his Reichstag speech last Friday. He was back on the job tonight, preparing for the week-end conferences with Balkan statesmen.

During the interval he visited Weimar, where he went to the theater, manifesting great interest in plans for the furtherance of the German stage. From there he went to Bayreuth where, at a music festival, he spent an afternoon listening to his favorite selections from Wagner.

At Munich he took part in discussions of a committee selecting canvases for a forthcoming art exhibit.

Torrent of German Bombers Roars Over Britain; 20 Downed in Day

there only a few minutes. No bombs dropped nearby and the tour continued.

Heavy rain, ice and lightning hampered the R. A. F. counterattack. However, the air ministry reported bombing of two airplane factories in Germany, at Wismar and Wenzendorf; two Dutch seaplane bases and the docks at Emden, Wilhelmshaven and Hamburg, on the German North Sea coast.

In the first raid, the Nazi planes sowed bombs in a line half a mile long, but none of the convoyed ships appeared to have been hit.

In the brilliant sunshine they made sparkling targets for ground gunners and, caught by a tremendous barrage of shells, they dived, twisted and climbed to escape.

One, running from British fighters, plummeted into a field, smoke pouring from protesting engines. It hit a wall and burst into flames as one of its occupants threw a companion to safety. The pilot died in the flames, the second German escaped with a broken leg and a third was seized by British soldiers.

"He had a package of English cigarettes in his pockets," said one onlooker, in amazement.

From the German radio, the English heard the German high command's claim that the great Vickers aircraft factory at Weybridge, 12 miles from the southwestern outskirts of London, was bombed last night, and that there were attacks on industrial plants from Great Yarmouth to Glasgow.

The British authorities made no comment on these German claims. The British do not permit publication of the names of places bombed in England.

Not counting the planes shot down today, it was announced that Britain's home defenses, since June 18, have destroyed 262 raiders—an average of about 5 a day.

The physical side of the war dwarfed the rest of the scene for Britons today. There was, however, an echo of the collapse of British postappeasement, prewar diplomacy. The Rumanian government recalled its pro-British Minister to London, Viorel Virgil Tilea, and the British noted it officialy "with regret." Tilea is not expected to go back soon to Rumania, now wholly in the Axis orbit.

Rumania may, or may not, name a successor in Wasile Stoica, present Ambassador to Turkey and a friend of King Carol.

The House of Commons will debate foreign affairs in secret next Tuesday.

Reporter Describes Great Air Battles

By Edward W. Beattie, Jr.

United Press Staff Writer

A Southeast Port, England, July 25.—I watched more than 200 British and German planes fight one of the biggest air battles of the war today as Nazi dive-bombers and fighters struck with bombs and machine guns at British shipping off this port.

It was one of three big aerial battles I saw from a height overlooking the harbor, outside which three or four tiny trawlers plodded on patrol, seemingly oblivious to bombs falling from the sky.

The waves of German bombers and fighters began coming over at noon when more than 80 raiders dropped out of the sky on a convoy. A few hours later I saw 24 Stuka dive bombers attack another convoy of 22 plodding little vessels. Both flights were heavily engaged by British fighters.

(The Berlin radio claimed that German raiders sank 11 British merchantmen out of a convoy of 23.)

But it was not until late afternoon that the biggest air battle occurred.

Dive-bombers had attacked a convoy 3 miles off shore. British fighters sped to the rescue and soon more than 200 British and German planes were locked in combat.

As bombs fell about the convoy, completely obscuring it from view, I saw dozens of individual dog fights raging in the sky.

Only a short time later two British destroyers left port and sped to within a short distance of the French coast where they turned their guns on German objectives and began blasting away.

British motor torpedo boats had swept out ahead to lay down a smoke screen behind which the destroyers fired away with a terrific barrage.

Europe Beginning to Feel Pinch Of Food Shortage, Fears Famine

Italy Rations Bread; French People Beg At Swiss Border

By the Associated Press

Food shortages were beginning to make themselves felt in Europe yesterday—shortages which may turn to famine if the war goes on.

That Europe is beginning to feel the pinch was indicated in reports from various capitals.

Italy's minister of agriculture admitted that, despite Premier Mussolini's annual "battle of wheat" to make Italy as self-sustaining as possible, that crop this year will be 28,292,000 bushels less than last. Poor weather was responsible.

Bread rationing was ordered in Italian restaurants, as well as another "meatless day"—which makes four weekly.

Short crops already have been reported in the Balkans—Europe's "breadbasket" when she is on her own.

France Now in Web

Most ironic was the situation in unoccupied France, a few weeks ago joined with Britain in enforcing a food blockade upon Germany, now reduced to calling through her newspapers for Germany to give her food.

Five or six million refugees from northern France and Belgium have crowded into southern France, reportedly putting a distressing burden upon the country.

France, never self-sustaining, now is caught in the blockade of her former British ally.

The censored French press said "the fate of France for months" depends upon German leniency in allowing food supplies to come from occupied France.

Reports from Basel, Switzerland, indicated northern France is not much better off.

Even French farmers were reported living off German relief, others going to the Swiss frontier to beg for food.

Britain Also Feels Pinch

Spain, to whom Britain does not intend to permit supplies which might find their way to Germany or Italy, reached an agreement with Portugal and Britain yesterday for wheat supplies for her own use. Spain is to buy about $2,400,000 worth.

Britain, whom Germany is attempting to blocade with bomb and torpedo, also showed signs of feeling the pinch of wartime conditions.

Supply Minister Herbert Morrison is planning to let up on the intense seven-day speedup in munitions factories, it was announced, because workers are showing strain and exhaustion.

But continued German bombing raids on merchant convoys in the North Sea and along the southeast coast indicated Germany has not yet been able to force Britain to give up the use of her eastern and southern ports.

Armistice Unwanted in France, Says Couturiere, a Refugee

Mrs. Jeanne Grady Tells of Experiences Escaping Nazi Drive

MRS. JEANNE GRADY

The French people did not want the armistice and they hope for British victory, says Mrs. Jeanne Grady, who left her home in Paris just four days before the Germans entered the city. She labels as Nazi propaganda reports that the French were incensed over the seizure of their ships by the British navy. They knew Great Britain had no alternative, she declares.

Mrs. Grady is better known to her American friends as Mme. Alexis, whose dress shop they often patronized in Paris. She is a native of France but her former husband is an American. She has visited this country on several occasions. She sailed from Lisbon aboard the Manhattan July 12 and is at present a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Waters, 3110 Forty-fifth street. Her son Daniel, a student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is also in the Capital for the summer.

Mrs. Grady, accompanied by a friend, left Paris in her car the day the government evacuated. She put such belongings as she could carry in her car and the friend drove. A short distance out of Paris the car stalled.

They were compelled to leave it on the road with all their belongings in it, as the Germans were dropping bombs hourly. They got the first train from a nearby point, and at midnight reached a little village, Chateau du Loir, where the 400 passengers crowded into the station.

Nazis May Get Into Britain, But Won't Get Out, Says Editor

SIMNETT

Maj. W. E. Simnett, M. B. E., a Briton here on an extraordinary mission, considering the times, made the observation yesterday that the Germans may get into the British Isles—but they won't get out.

Maj. Simnett, founder and editor of the Crown Colonist, despite the times, was sent to America by Lord Lloyd, colonial minister, "to express the thanks and appreciation of the British government for the valued and extensive cooperation of American institutions and individuals in the work of developing social and public services throughout the British Colonial Empire."

This would seem to demonstrate what he says—that the British people, confronted with threatened invasion, are composed. "Could I transport you quickly to London you would witness this," Maj. Simnett observed.

They do not, however, discount the fact that they have a hard job on their hands, he emphasized.

Maj. Simnett will tour the United States, explaining British colonial administration "and especially the important part played by American cooperation . . ." He will return to England in October and will probably step into an old uniform, he said.

Dewey Leader Sees Willkie Today

are being invited, he said, as well as party representatives from Missouri, which has not yet held its State ticket primary.

If the present dry weather continues, the session might develop into a second "drought conference," with all the participants Republican this time.

In 1936 President Roosevelt discussed the drought in the same Statehouse with several Midwestern Senators and Governors, notably former Gov. Landon of Kansas, the Republican Presidential nominee four years ago.

Willkie is also scheduled to deliver a short address from the State house steps before an outdoor crowd August 5.

Home Town Gets Ready

Elwood, Ind., July 25.—Callaway Park, site of the notification ceremonies for home-towner Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, is being enlarged from a 40-acre picnic ground for Elwood residents to a 350-acre tract capable of accommodating the 300,000 to 350,000 persons expected here for Willkie's acceptance speech August 17.

The Pennsylvania and Nickel Plate Railroads have advised Homer E. Capehart, stage manager of the celebration, that they have already received requests for between 75 and 110 special trains to carry visitors to Elwood from distant points next month. Still more special trains are anticipated.

Farmland adjoining Callaway Park has been leased from the owners, who are being paid off on the estimated yield of corn from acreage that will be turned over to the visiting hordes. Fences throughout the park and on the adjoining farms are being removed to make the tract easily accessible. Huge parking lots are being laid out.

"We will be able to handle everyone who comes," Capehart said.

Wallace Believed Planning to Quit

ence with the President yesterday, Secretary Wallace told newsmen: "We talked matters over from various angles."

He said his decision on leaving or remaining in the Cabinet was not a matter for determination "until I start engaging in political activity."

"I don't interpret my notification as political activity unless I should make a ripsnorting speech," he added, laughing.

Asked directly whether he will remain in the Cabinet, seek a leave of absence or resign, Wallace replied:

"I intend to look up all of the precedents and determine what is right, just and fair to the American people."

A reporter wanted to know whether the President suggested he do most of the stump speaking?

"No," he replied. "I have made no political plans whatever. That is a matter for a future conference."

Asked whether he discussed with the President a successor to Farley, he said: "Very generally."

Wallace said the exact scene of his own notification ceremonies had not been determined but said Des Moines was as good a guess as any.

Among those suggested to take Wallace's post have been Claude R. Wickard, Undersecretary of Agriculture; Chester Davis, Federal Reserve Board member, and Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, recently named to the Court of Claims. A number of editors of farm publications also have been discussed, including Clarence Roberts, of the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman, and Clifford V. Gregory, associate editor of Wallace's Farmer.

Point to McNary

If Wallace steps down, Democratic stalwarts are expected to direct a running attack on continuance in the Senate of Senate Minority Leader McNary, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee. In a prelude to this, Senator Minton, of Indiana, Senate majority whip, declared in a statement: "Those who are protesting the loudest again Secretary Wallace remaining in the Cabinet, while a candidate for Vice President, have no fault to find with Senator McNary for remaining at his post in the Senate."

Other developments:

Senator Harrison, of Minnesota, who worked closely with Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, for the third-term nomination of the President at Chicago, declared his support of the "Roosevelt-Wallace" ticket. Harrison said later on he will make some speeches for the ticket if asked.

Latest antithird term group organized here was the "Southern Committee for Jeffersonian Democracy, Incorporated," with announced "opposition to the perpetual re-eligibility of anyone to occupy the office of the President of the United States, including opposition to three terms for any President." Signing the incorporation papers were Crandal Mackey of Arlington, Va., Levi H. David of Columbia, S. C. and Mary Chester Perryn, of Washington.

Walter S. Hallanan, Republican National Committeeman for West Virginia, following a conference with Republican Chairman Martin, said he found "literally an avalanche of sentiment (in West Virginia) for Wendell Willkie. He has been able to mobilize behind him all the elements of opposition to the New Deal in West Virginia." He added that many Democrats in the State are "taking great pride" in announcing for Willkie.

The raids, police said, were carried out quietly and there was little trouble from the suspects. All 162 prisoners were booked for investigation and questioned individually before being jailed or released.

Police continued to seek several persons for whom they held warrants, but who were not present when the raid took place.

Police officials indicated that last night's raids were the forerunner of others throughout the city.

British Face Huge Italian Army in Africa

French Surrender Blasts Plan to Invade Roman Peninsula

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 25.—A comparatively small force of British and native troops is digging in doggedly to hold Africa and the Near East against 300,000 Italian troops menaced, in turn, by the British navy's blockade of their sea-borne supplies.

France's surrender changed Britain's sweeping plans for swift expulsion of the Italians from Africa and placed Britain's own forces, now outnumbered and lacking reinforcements, on the defensive.

But the British military authorities do not appear to be alarmed.

"The success of the navy in the Mediterranean and the air force in Africa guarantee successful resistance to any Italian offensive," said one officer.

Nevertheless, now that the French Middle Eastern army and French Mediterranean fleet are hors de combat, Britain has had to give up the plan dear to the hearts of those who believe the best way to hit Germany is through her weakest front—Italy.

It is quite evident that the Allied high command, prior to the French surrender, considered feasible simultaneous attacks by the French and British on Libya, great north African Italian colony, and then, invasion of Italy.

The Royal Air Force, ranging over the desert, has borne the heaviest share of the defense of Egypt and the Sudan.

The British land forces—white, native and Indian—have been in action constantly since the outbreak of war with Italy.

The "Arab Legion," next to the Royal Air Force, is Britain's chief reliance for scouting and harassing.

British Won't 'Protect' Eire

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 25.—The British have given the Irish government assurances that they will not make any attempt to give Eire military protection unless the Germans attack her. This was learned here today at the same time that it became known that the British had virtually written off the possibility of anticipating a German attack and being there ready for an invading army.

Public opinion in Eire is such that if the British are called to the rescue they will be in the same position they were in Belgium, Holland and Norway in catching up with the German army. The British were informed that feeling in Eire is such that the first British soldier to land there would set the whole country in flames.

RICHARD EATON

Richard Eaton Here, Tells of German Radio Aims in France

Richard Eaton, who for years in France listened to persuasive German propaganda and grew to fear its power, came here yesterday to urge America to propagandize its ideals.

He had a stake in the democracy France lost. Twenty-five newspapers he had published there in the last 20 years are in the occupied territories.

He isn't here, he said, to talk about that. He says the spirit of the French people isn't crushed. It would be immeasurably raised, as would the spirit of all free peoples, if America afforded an antidote to Germany's propaganda.

Nazis "Supreme" on Air

Eaton thinks the United States should turn a barrage of its democratic ideals particularly upon South America. The Government should do this, he believes.

"It is a field as vast as that of rearmament, and one in which we are completely unprepared," he said. Radio fans sometimes listen to Europe, but Europe or South America practically ignore the existence of American ideals on the air, where the Nazis reign supreme."

Eaton fears that Germany's hammering propaganda will yet give it the conditions of peace it wants. Taking it in daily big doses, the conquered people and others living in fear of the Germans can be lulled, he believes.

He does not think the alleged laxness in preparation for war by the French popular front government was entirely, or even greatly, responsible for the French collapse. He attributes it to the mechanized invaders, to the French generals "who didn't keep up with the times."

Petain "Bamboozled," He Says

He thinks the Petain government is without followers, that Petain, growing old, "was bamboozled" and "shoved around politically" by the Germans.

Eaton said he was in the town of Tartas when the armistice was announced. A stranger there, he inquired of a man on the street about a good eating place. "How can you eat after what has happened?" he was asked. He said that was the mood of the people generally.

Eaton, a Harvard graduate, who says his papers weren't the greatest in the world, "but were very good," is stopping at the Washman Park Hotel with Mrs. Eaton.

Man Admits Ax Slaying of Wife

Los Angeles, July 25 (U.P.).—A middle-aged man told police tonight that he killed his asserted common-law wife two weeks ago with an ax, stuffed her body in the back of his automobile, and had been driving around since.

He was arrested after calling a passerby to drive his car for him. Police said he was too drunk. The passerby found the body in the car.

Berlin Favors Breton Move For Autonomy

Platform for Future National State Adopted, Says Report

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 25.—The old Breton autonomist movement to make a separate state of the jutting northwestern corner of France was reported tonight by D. N. B., official German news agency, to have received official German recognition.

A separate military governor has been appointed for Brittany, which was annexed to France four centuries ago. He is Gen. Weyer, and his headquarters will be the Rennes prefecture, once the target of autonomist bombs.

A. D. N. B. dispatch from Rennes quoted the newspaper L'Heure Bretonne as saying this means "German authorities officially recognize the existence of Brittany."

The executive committee of the Breton National Council, moreover, was reported to have met at Rohan Palace in Pontivy and to have adopted a platform for the future state.

The platform said, according to D. N. B., that "The system of suppression of Bretons has been destroyed. At the proper time the council will create a national state."

"Brittany for the Bretons" was described as the basis for the future constitution, under which international relations with both Germany and France will "be determined by mutual treaties."

As for the war between Germany and England, the platform, as described, places Bretons "against their old Celtic enemies."

Before the war the Breton autonomists formed a small but active minority. After the war began, several leaders were imprisoned.

Ancient Brittany was invaded by Caesar in 56 B. C. and became "Armorica." In the fifth and sixth centuries it was overrun by Celts from Britain, and Celtic still is spoken in some regions.

Typhoid Germs Lurk in Streams, Vacationists Told

Typhoid germs may lurk in the old oaken bucket and in the clearest sparkling stream, George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, warned vacationing motorists yesterday.

He pointed out that the experience of former years has shown that typhoid and other diseases have been traced to vacationists drinking polluted water.

"Water should always be boiled," he said. "If facilities for boiling water are not available, the water may be purified by the use of iodine, one drop to a quart of water. When the water is very strongly polluted, two drops may be used with safety."

Michigan Man Named Head of Lion's Clubs

Havana, July 25 (AP).—Karl M. Sorrick, of Jackson, Mich., was elected president of the International Association of Lion's Clubs today for the 1941 term.

At the same time the association, in convention here, named New Orleans, La., Buffalo, N. Y., and Chicago, Ill., as alternate cities for the 1941 convention. Final selection will be made from among the three.

Other officers named today included: Third vice president, Dr. Elbyrne G. Gill, Roanoke, Va.

Timber-Toppers Star In Play of Temperament

'Maryland,' on Palace Screen, Presents Exciting Melodrama of 'Horsey' Life In Manor Country of the Free State

"MARYLAND." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization in Technicolor of a screen play by Ethel Hill and Jack Andrews, featuring Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce, John Payne, Charles Ruggles and Hattie McDaniel, with Marjorie Weaver, Sidney Blackmer, Ben Carter, Ernest Whitman, Paul Harvey, Spencer Charters, Ed Thorgersen, William Davidson, Clarence Muse, Gladden James, Edward Fielding and scores more. Directed by Henry King. At Loew's Palace Theater.

THERE ARE SO MANY divergent elements of appeal woven into the Twentieth Century-Fox Technicolor production of "Maryland," opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, that it ought to prove an elegant diversion for a large cross-cut of Washington's mid-summer theatergoers.

BELL

There is romance, comedy and melodrama galore in this story of the "horsey set" in our neighboring State. There is also a considerable meed of poignance and bitter conflict. These contrasting ingredients do not always jell too well, as the story goes along, but they culminate in a running of the Maryland Hunt Club Steeplechase—the greatest field event of its kind known to the American turf—that is so realistic and thrilling that earlier blemishes in the story-telling probably will be forgotten by all but the inordinately captious.

Love of thoroughbred horseflesh furnishes the crux of the whole exciting business. The major conflict, upon which the suspense of the film is based, is waged between William Stewart, the old hoss trainer; the mistress of Broadlawn, the estate upon which he labors, and in lesser degree, her son and his daughter. After a brief tribute to the traditional and historic grandeurs of the Free State of Maryland, the picture gets immediately into the stables and paddocks. As the fictional narrative gets under way, Charlotte Danfield is more concerned about the foal down in the barn than the baby she herself is about to bear. In later years, when the colt causes the death of her husband in a bad spill, she orders this best horse in the stables destroyed and all horses removed from the estate famous for their breeding. From then on, it is the will of one woman, pitted against the better judgment of everyone else involved, that gives the drama its major impetus and final fillip.

As all this progresses, sequences are introduced that are highly amusing in themselves but seem to have little bearing upon the directness or forcefulness of the plot. In such a spacious picture of the out-of-doors as "Maryland," these are considerations of no vast importance. Anyhow, all of the tag ends are securely knotted at the finish and prove to have been of more consequence than at first suspected.

The producers have stinted no more in the matter of cast than in the spectacular matter of opulent production. Technicolor lends great visual beauty to a film that is continuously entertaining; its cast bring fullness and credibility to a yarn that is not too loosely knit to be, for the most part, engrossing. The pivotal roles are played at the top of their skill by Walter Brennan, as the aging horse-breeder, and Fay Bainter, as the rebellious and hard-headed Charlotte. Brennan matches, if he does not surpass, the same sort of characterization he contributed to the earlier "Kentucky." Miss Bainter is, as always, a believable and admirable actress. The foremost of juvenile roles are vigorously interpreted by John Payne and Brenda Joyce, principally worried about whose horse it is and who shall ride him in the big race. Charles Ruggles is the picture's symbol of artistocratic and bibulous comedy and Hattie McDaniel—the Mammy of "GWTW"—and Ben Carter are richly humorous as the chief servitors at Broadlawn. The remainder of the huge cast reflects discriminating choice on the part of TCF.

Next to the climactic running of the steeplechase race—with running commentary by Ed Thorgersen, noted sports announcer—perhaps the most exciting scene in the picture is devoted to the Negro revival meeting, where Shadrach "gets religion." This is done in the "Porgy" manner with some mighty hymn-singing to make it memorable. It is here that Clarence Muse, Hattie McDaniel, Ben Carter and Ernest Whitman, among the foremost actors of their race, particularly shine.

The faithful replica of the cross-country race is almost picture enough, without the magnificent investiture it has been given. "Maryland," throughout, is a gorgeous reflection of a luxurious way of life in the manor country.

The short subjects augmenting the new bill at the Palace add further enlivenment to top-hole hot-weather entertainment. In addition to the new issue of the "News of the Day," Pete Smith expatiates upon the novelties of "Cat College," in which Clyde Beatty, celebrated animal trainer, demonstrates how he schools lions and tigers, and "Tom Turkey" struts through a diverting M.-G.-M. cartoon comedy. But it is "Maryland" that deserves to go to the post an odds-on favorite.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 25 (INS).—You can discount all the dizzy rumors that George Raft is sending orchids to Marlene Dietrich, jumping off planes to see showgirls and making dates with this one and that one. The Raft-Shearer romance has never been hotter. In fact it is so torrid that come next September Norma and George will be costarred in "The World We Make," the Sidney Kingsley play. While the stage play wasn't what you might call a smash hit, the book, "The Outward Room," by Millen Brand is really worthwhile.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

George has the right to make outside pictures and so his M.-G.-M. deal is all set for September. Meanwhile Norma, Doris and Mervyn Leroy are heading for Saratoga Tuesday to spend the month of August. It doesn't take a Solomon to prophesy that George will join them after he finishes his personal appearance session in New York. Mervyn will direct the romancers, and Hunt Stromberg will produce, so you see, this will be a very special movie.

Grand news for Hedy Lamarr. She will be permitted to keep her adopted son, Jimmie, for a year, and at the end of that time the Children's Society will decide whether the little boy will have the dark-eyed movie star for his permanent mother. I am very happy for Hedy that such a decision has been made for she has worried herself almost sick. Gene Markey, who is separated from the glamour girl, is still very friendly with her, and I have no doubt that he put in a word for his estranged wife. Certainly it is better for little Jimmie to have the devoted care of a woman who worships him and a home with every comfort. Hedy was so harrassed with the fear that they might take him that she has been unable to even discuss her next picture, "Come Live With Me," but now the world is a different place.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Oren Haglund-Ginger Rogers twosome continuing at the Brown Derby. Wonder what happened to Howard Hughes? Sympathy goes to Mr. and Mrs. James Hogan in the death of their 5-month-old baby who choked to death yesterday. He is a director at Paramount; Van Heflin, reported to be Katie Hepburn's heart, at the Beverly Tropics with Barbara Read; Elaine Barrie Barrymore, arrayed in slacks and a fortune in jewels, came into the same place with her ma; Mrs. Don Ameche, who had her fourth Cesarian operation when her last baby was born, must remain at the hospital for an additional month; the big yearly shindig at the Westside Tennis Club will be held August 3, and this year it's a bowery party; a tremendous crowd of over 23,000 people gathered at the Hollywood Bowl to hear Paul Robson and the Hall Johnson Choir. The movie crowd was well represented. Glimpsed were the Robert Montgomerys, Marlene Dietrich, the Richard Barthelmesses with his daughter, Mary Hay, and scores of others.

Irene Dunne is entertaining Eloise Wright, Bronxville socialite. She looks like Cobina Wright, jr., and interestingly enough, Robert Stack has been giving her a rush. Irene is having the time of her life with her young guest; Brenda Frazier, million-dollar glamour girl, is expected in Santa Barbara—only 100 miles from Hollywood; Floyd Bate, the American commentator on the short wave from the seat of the British war zone, is heard by many people. So it's interesting that his daughter, Mrs. Hugh Chisham, is visiting here; Valentine, who makes clothes or who made clothes for many of the theatrical stars, has been looking Hollywood over; Jean Arthur is taking her vacation in a station wagon. Sounds like fun.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, July 25.

I don't know how the Brothers Warner and their associates learned the recipe for making the darndest exciting, a washbuckling, bloodthirsty, virile pictures that we're seeing today, but they seem to have some inner secret that they're not letting out. "The Sea Hawk" was one of the ripsnortingest, and is guaranteed to raise your blood pressure from subzero. Even when he's dirty, Errol Flynn is dashing. Flora Robson's Queen Elizabeth came right out of a history book. In fact, it wouldn't be a bad idea to let her manage some country today. She's got what it takes. Brenda Marshall was the lucky wench that got the love scenes—but not enough.

HOPPER

As you watch the picture, you know that the English are going to knock the armor off the Spanish in one of the fiercest battles in history, and you hope they'll do the same thing to Mr. Hitler's hell-happy henchmen who rain poison from the skies. The credit for "The Sea Hawk"—and there's plenty of it—goes to Director Mike Curtiz.

Since the news came out that Paulette Goddard had thrown Lynne Overman for a loop and over her shoulder in "Northwest Mounted," she's become the heroine in the lives of the two Chaplin boys, and is now, believe it or not, teaching them how to throw their own father!

That Jane Pickens at the Cocoanut Grove is some girl. Her song satires are packed with subtle humor, and she really has a voice. And when she sings of the typical debutante who "simply must do something to keep from being bored to death" so sings in a night club, Jane introduces her song by saying, "Any similarity to debutantes living or dead is purely malicious." And Eddy Duchin, who's not bad on the ivories, beams his approval . . .

I'm afraid all four of Bing Crosby's young 'uns are in for operations. When Bing was showing me a family picture the other day, he said: "Adenoids. Look at 'em. Every one with his kisser wide open—waiting for the doctor."

On "Bad Man From Wyoming" Wally Berry rides a horse. It's one of those sturdy, broad-beamed animals, and the company's in hysterics, because Beery has to have three steps in order to mount it. But after he gets up there, he can ride like the dickens. He's not carrying a torch, but a conflagration for his former wife. I actually believe he'd give half of everything he's got—which is about $3,000,000—if he could get her back. Little Carol Ann comes to the studio daily and gets her horseback ride before the company starts shooting.

One Harold Minnear, former welfare worker for the Los Angeles schools, is the one who holds the stop watch on "Little Men" set. Whether it's for Elsie, Jack Oakie, George Bancroft, or eight-months-old Billy Ryan, jr., I wouldn't know. In the scene I watched, the two comics, Oakie and Bancroft, have a loud talffest. Baby looked from one to the other, as much as to say, "Say, who's the straight guy in this scene?" Both, say I—babies always win . . .

'Kismet' Acted Before Crowd At Sylvan

Eckington-Roosevelt Group Attracts 3,500 To Play of Bagdad

By Richard L. Coe

Our clammy climate lent an unwelcome but convincing reality last night to Edward Knoblock's celebrated play of the warm Tigris valley, "Kismet," performed before an audience of 3,500 in the Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds.

The Eckington-Roosevelt Players drew on its apparently limitless resources to people this "Arabian Night's" tale with a population worthy of its fabulous setting, the Bagdad of the Caliphs. The production picked up its pace gradually after a somewhat static opening scene, while the settings, costumes and aforementioned weighty weather lent an atmosphere of lush, Oriental flamboyance. That the players were able to muster enough vitality to even passively entertain their listless audience was one of the evening's most rewarding achievements.

Lively Dancing Interpolated

It was back in 1911 that Otis Skinner, then a man of almost 50, first played Hajj, the wretched beggar of Bagdad whose legend has so interesting a resemblance to Victor Hugo's play, "Le Roi s'Amuse," which became the story for Verdi's opera, "Rigoletto." Like Hugo's hunchback, the avenging beggar had kept his daughter a hidden prize and was involved in a plot which evolved upon an affair of her heart.

A scene of lively interest and color was the early one in the bazaar, which Director Pauline Eaton Oak kept moving with roving players, two of whom entered from the audience, a telling device which might have been even further accented. The noted scene in the Mansur's Harem was also strikingly colorful, the dancing created by Alice Louise Hunter bringing much vivid impressionism to that garden of Allah. Kathleen Davis, Gloria Cone and Marjorie McGann lead the ensemble in this dancing scene.

Worthy Technical Devices

Harold Snyder's compelling setting of the Mosque, employed throughout the three acts as a set piece, was well adapted to the Sylvan's unrivaled situation. The Mosaic details on that piece were the work of Helen Johnson, while the Hamman lattice was created by Adelaide Kummer and Robert Peters.

Hajj was played by Charles Shoemaker, and Fred Peters was the youthful Caliph. Rhodes K. Scherer acted the Wasir Mansur. Miss Hunter and Miss Johnson played the leading feminine roles of Marsinah and her duenna, Marjis. Others in the large company included Robert Peters, Gaston Litton, Herbert Miller, Irving Hoffman, Prevost Holmes, Robert J. Simms, Edward H. Yeager, J. Braxton McClurkin, James B. Williams, Noble Barnes, W. Earle Brazier, Robert Cowan, Robert Talks, jr., Elvie Swalec, Willard Jones, Peggy Kummer, Adelaide Kummer, Lillian Penn, Camilla Kummer, Marcus Rolls, Anna Loch, Bolores Morganston, Willard Jones, jr., James Simms, Stanley Lee, David Hubert, John Stanley Maybee, Harold Bennett, Jack Buchanan, Esma Maybee, Helen Wright, Samuel Schwartz, Morton Schiff, Rudolph Arkin, Dick Dove, Bobby Jones, Irwin Blacker, Betty Ann Eilers, Bobby Simms, Max Franzen, Arnold Lane and Ilse Kirchofer.

A half-hour concert by the Chevy Chase Dairy Band preceded the performance, which was presented by the Community Center and Playgrounds Department and the Office of National Capital Parks.

Columbia

One of the silly season's funnier films — unintentional variety — returns to F street today after a previous week at the Capitol. The Columbia is the scene of this incredible rebirth; "Safari" is the film.

It is in the heart of the African jungle, during a civilized hunting trip, that the well-groomed triangle of Madeleine Carroll-Douglas Fairbanks, jr.-Tullio Carminati is formed. She is looking out for her physical comforts. He is an aviator-veteran of wars in China and Spain, now guiding folk about one of the darker continents. And he, hiss-hiss, is the wealthy eel who wants to clap her into his gilded net. Would it be quite cricket to let on that one of the men gets shot, is chased by the girl and eventually consents to marry her? It isn't Mr. Carminati, either.

This delightful history of life among our betters demands interesting wardrobes, not very much exertion on the parts of the players and gets such cooperation as it seeks. Lynne Overman is a Scotsman to end all Scotsmen, a chap who turns up in the swamps to make money from the natives. There are brief moments for Muriel Angelus, Billy Gilbert and some annoyed - looking natives. There's also a swell yacht, a crummy river steamer, a sorely-tired airplane and some wild animals that have been reposing on Paramount celluloid for a decade or two.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 25.

SAM HARRIS once induced the Marx Bros. to invest in a chain-store corporation whose outlets later diminished to but five stores. The Marxes read the company's financial report and learned that the officers were receiving as much salary as they did when the chain had been an important one. Because the Marxes owned a substantial stock interest, they decided to attend a stockholders' meeting and effect wholesale reductions in salary . . . "But remember," Harpo and Zeppo warned Groucho, "don't crack any jokes during the meeting. Restrain yourself." . . . At the first session the president asked for a salary increase, while Groucho joked—and got it . . . The Marxes conferred before the second session and again warned Groucho . . . The company's general manager then took over and announced that he was resigning—to go into the ice cream business . . . Harpo stared at him and made but one comment: "What flavor?"

GEORGE BYE, the literary agent, already has suffered a financial setback as a result of the President's decision to accept a third-term nomination. Bye holds a contract in which Roosevelt agreed to write magazine articles and a newspaper column after his retirement from politics. Bye also holds a contract with Al Smith to write a book for Doubleday, Doran—concerning his break with the New Deal. The contract provides that this book is to be written after the President's political career is concluded.

GEORGE RAFT was at the Hurricane Tuesday night, trying to concoct a routine for his personal appearance engagement at the Strand. The man who was helping him, by contributing gags and comic ideas, was Bert Wheeler—who will be Raft's direct competitor across the street, at Loew's State . . . When Raft, incidentally, appeared in "The House Across the Bay," his director was absent for one day, and Alfred Hitchcock was asked to help, by directing some closeups. "You know," Hitchcock warned Raft, "that I think all actors are cattle?" Raft replied, "Yes, I know—but I'm no actor."

CHIEF JUSTICE Hughes is telling this story of the time when, after his defeat by Woodrow Wilson, he became president of the Union League Club, one fall night in 1917 he joined Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root and Joseph Choate. Roosevelt was anxious to get Wilson's permission to reorganize his Rough Riders and head a division in France. Hughes quickly changed the subject . . . Roosevelt turned to Choate and pleaded: "Talk to Wilson. I've just got to get over there. My boys are over there." Choate changed the subject . . . The former President then turned to Root and said: "Talk to Wilson, to send me over there. My boys are there, and I'm sure they'll never come back." Root remained silent . . . "I'll go over," Roosevelt continued, "and I'm sure I'll never come back." . . . "In that case," said Root, "I think the President may give his consent."

RAY HEATHERTON will continue at the Rainbow Room through the fall because the management is so much pleased with his engagement there . . . Columbia's "The Howards of Virginia" delighted the previewers.

SENATOR BARKLEY was disappointed at the convention's close. He loves to sing, and started to do "God Bless America" as a solo—but the entire hall joined in the chorus.

BASCOM TIMMONS, the Washington correspondent who received one vote for the nomination as Vice President, met a New Dealer who confessed that he had been in charge of the "Stop-Timmons" movement . . . "You should've known that you didn't have a chance," Timmons was told . . . "But I thought I had a chance," sighed Timmons, "because Bargeron, my manager, assured me that he had tied up enough men to win the nomination." . . . "Then why didn't those men come through?" the candidate was asked . . . "They couldn't," he explained, "because they were all alternates—they had no vote."

The Role Of Scapegoat

The character of the present French government is well attested by the arrest of former Premier Daladier and a number of other French politicians on the charge that they threw France unprepared into war against Germany. In a democratic state one does not hold a political leader personally responsible for the policies followed by the government. He is considered a representative of the people, and they, in final analysis, must accept responsibility for the mistakes of a leadership which depends upon their support.

The distinguishing feature of a totalitarian state is that it concentrates not only total power but also total responsibility in the hands of a single man. Hitler, indeed, consistently lays great stress upon the personal accountability of those in power. To his way of thinking there is something absurd in the idea of a diffused, mass responsibility for the acts of the man or men who guide the destinies of the state. When the leader is once chosen, he assumes responsibility for the welfare of the people. If he succeeds, his is the credit. If he fails, for him the blame.

Of course, nobody with the slightest understanding of the present era could possibly hold any individual responsible for the tragic fate that has overtaken France and other nations. Hitler himself is a product of countless errors of judgment during these past 20 years. And those who committed those errors were in turn the products of their environment. They reflected the desires and wishes of the people; they shared public short-sightedness and led where the public seemed to wish to go.

Although it seems fantastic to attribute the downfall of France to the group of unfortunate politicians who happened to be in power when the crisis came, there is method in this seeming madness. In finding scapegoats, the Petain government is at the same time warning all Frenchmen of the dangers of internal resistance. The patent injustice of the whole proceeding makes it the more effective from the standpoint of any regime that rules by imposing its will upon the people.

Organized persecutions of individuals, groups and classes are to be found in every country living under the rule of dictators. They are not merely disciplinary measures designed to suppress revolt or punish nonconformists. They are systematic devices for keeping a subject people submissive and preventing resurgence of the spirit of liberty.

Great Expectations

The British need many times the number of airplanes they have been able to purchase here. The American people would like to see factories in this country supplying a far larger number of fighting aircraft for the defense of the British Isles. It would, however, be most unfortunate to raise false hopes by overestimating the extent of the aid it is possible for us to give.

For that reason it was disturbing to have Lord Beaverbrook assert confidently in his Wednesday night broadcast that "the United States Government will approve a plan to put into immediate production airplanes for our (British) account up to a total output of 3,000 per month."

Secretary Morgenthau's somewhat vaguely expressed confirmation of that statement does nothing to dispel a growing sense of uneasiness over the lavishness of our promises of performance. Mr. Morgenthau further says that the British are prepared to finance the building of the plants required to step up the program as required and to buy their output. This, too, requires elaboration.

How long would it take to reach the 3,000 airplanes per month goal set for the British and how much longer will it be before the industry can supply the 50,000 additional planes said to be needed annually for our own defense? Mr. Morgenthau has no information to offer on these points. But experts have estimated that five years will be required to build up plant capacity to the point at which President Roosevelt's 50,000 planes per year goal can be attained. The computation indicates that the British are due for serious disappointment if they rely upon Lord Beaverbrook's assurances.

As a matter of fact, Great Britain is obtaining a large and rapidly increasing amount of aid from the United States. That is revealed in a current report on arms export licenses issued by the Department of State. In June licenses permitting the exportation of aircraft, arms and other military equipment valued at $71,000,000 were issued, while the total for the six months ended in June amounted to $138,000,000. Thus it will be seen that American factories are already turning out a substantial volume of munitions for defense of Britain. It will increase, but not as rapidly as implied in the "great news" which Lord Beaverbrook says he got from Washington.

They Don't Wear Well

Reports from Havana indicate that the plan for "collective trusteeship," advocated by Secretary Hull in his speech at the opening of the Pan-American conference on Monday, is meeting a rather skeptical reception. This is scarcely surprising, in view of the great but ill-defined magnitude of the proposal.

There is much that is very hazy about the scheme to establish a system of mandates over European possessions, in this hemisphere, which might be detached from their present ownership as a result of the war. In the first place, the situation envisaged is hypothetical, and it is decidedly difficult to draft a precise international convention to deal with a hypothetical situation.

Beyond this defect, however, is evidence of some rather befuddled thinking on the part of experts in the Department of State. As the draft convention is worded it can be said to envisage a collective mandate over, for instance, the British colony of Newfoundland. Nobody seems to have inquired whether the sturdy people of that "oldest British colony" would acclaim the prospect of being governed by a mixed commission from, shall we say, Guatemala, Haiti and Peru.

The Department of State has cut a corner rather abruptly by suggesting that "the trusteeship shall be exercised by a committee consisting of one representative from each of the ratifying countries." This means that if the draft convention is adopted and not ratified by our Senate, which is certainly an ever-present possibility, then the United States would automatically be excluded from a share of operation in the plan which it has proposed.

In that eventuality Bermuda, to cite another possible development, might also come to be governed by a group of Latin-American countries. And if the stories of "Fifth Column" activities in some of those countries are to be believed, some of those governments might have a political complexion which we ourselves would not welcome on territory close to the coast of the United States.

While these suppositions are far-fetched they are well within the realm of possibility. And when a proposal of far-reaching scope is seriously proposed at an international conference, it should have been guarded in advance against such deficiencies as unfortunately are obvious in the "collective trusteeship" plan.

Nothing has yet been heard at Havana about the other great plan of an "international cartel," which recently was a nine-day White House wonder and has lately gently subsided beneath the waters of merited oblivion. Its place was taken by the "collective trusteeship" idea. And now realistic criticism seems also to be withering that bright flower at its fragile roots.

We shall not forward inter-American solidarity, nor greatly impress our Latin neighbors with the advisability thereof, unless we are able to present for their consideration ideas which maintain a certain luster after the first bright gleam of their initial effulgence has died away.

Kennst Du Das Land?

It is reported from Beirut that the French high commissioner for Syria has issued orders intended to improve the morals of that mandated area. Only classical music is to be permitted in public. Dance tunes are forbidden.

Doubtless the new regulations will relieve many offended ears, and if adopted in other lands would elicit some support. On purely moral grounds, however, the rule is open to question. It is conceivable that classical music depresses jitterbugs, even of the Syrian type, as much as the stomp and swing enrage the devotees of Bach and Beethoven. This ban does not smack of the old, free France.

More novel is the limitation on lemonade. Nobody ever thought of that before and the vice of lemonade drinking has, heretofore, been permitted openly in all lands. In less enlightened times parents even allowed the consumption of pink lemonade. Of course that was before the rise of Bolshevism.

Be that as it may, Syrians will, henceforth, be served lemonade only on three days a week. The rest of the time, presumably, unregenerate Arabs will have to depend for their refreshments on the lemon aid of bootleggers.

Expanding Bank Loans

During the past year the volume of commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of reporting member banks has increased by $571,000,000, and during the past six weeks alone there has been a rise of $96,000,000 in loans. With the defense program just getting under way, further expansion in loans is looked for. The degree of development depends partly upon the state of general business, and partly upon the extent to which the banks are ready to go in providing relatively long-term loans to finance plant expansion for defense purposes.

For a good many years we have been hearing of the marked change that has occurred in the character of banking activity. The total loans of all member banks dropped from $26,150,000,000 at the end of 1929 to approximately $14,000,000,000 at the end of last March. Concurrently total investments of the banks rose from $9,784,000,000 to $20,224,000,000. Various causes have been assigned for this decrease in loans. Commercial credit demands, for example, were reduced because of the prolonged depression. Moreover, the growth of corporate enterprise has resulted in greater reliance upon security issues to meet the financial needs of industry.

At the same time a long period of deficit financing by the Government has provided new investment outlets for the idle funds of member banks. According to latest reports they held $14,421,000,000 of direct and guaranteed Government issues, compared with $3,863,000,000 in 1929.

With the prospect of heavy Government deficits to come, the banks will no doubt continue indefinitely to provide lodgment for new Government issues. And with rising business activity they should also experience an enlarged demand for commercial loans. But discussions of plans for financing plant expansion by long-term amortized loans strikingly emphasize the new trends developing in the banking field. Relatively long-term capital loans of this type would once have been considered unsuitable business for commercial banks.

Many commercial banks are still reluctant to undertake this type of financing, believing that relatively long-term capital needs should be met in other ways. But with superabundant resources and a dearth of short-time, self-liquidating loans to employ them, the banks are venturing into new lending fields. They have been encouraged to do so, furthermore, by liberalization of the banking laws and by a less rigid attitude on the part of bank examiners.

Hence, while there is no reason to suppose that the investment trend in banking which has been in progress for so long a time will be reversed, it may well be that bank loans will show a pronounced expansion as the industries manufacturing for defense purposes need additional funds.

Of course much depends upon whether long-term credit needs are supplied by Government lending agencies or through regular banking and private investment channels. If industries requiring enlarged plant facilities are given assurance that amortization allowances will be liberal, and that reasonable profits will be allowed, bank loans and private security issues should provide most of the capital.

Another reason why we long for the days of our youth is because we were satisfied with what we knew then.

What is needed most in a political platform is a nonskid surface on the economy plank.

The average fundamentalist not only doesn't believe evolution is true, he isn't even in favor of it.

Planting Deep

From the Christian Science Monitor

One might say that M. P. Bodies, a North Carolina farmer, had two strings to his bow. But that would be mixing metaphors. He had two depths to his cotton-planter.

Mr. Bodies planted one seeding deep for dry weather and another shallow in case it should be a wet year. The season proved to be a late, dry one. Other cotton in the neighborhood was burned out, but the deep planting in the Bodies field came through for a good stand.

Of course, such a policy adopted generally would mean higher cost for seeding, but if it produced better yields it would be a relatively cheap kind of crop insurance. And some work of thinning out the plants usually has to be done anyway. Out of such simple resourcefulness as this sometimes come major innovations in ways of producing.

United States

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is the opinion of the writer from what knowledge he gathered in his travels abroad that there will be no peace in Europe, Asia or Africa until they set up a system by each group something along the line of the United States of America.

If there is going to be peace, Germany will have to relinquish her recent grab of seven or eight of her neighbor countries. England will have to relinquish her claim on her colonies. Japan will have to do the same and Italy the same. When the homeland of France is restored to her former self she will have to relinquish her claim on her colonies. And Russia will have to follow suit.

The United States of Europe can be set up—the United States of Asia and the United States of Africa. Then there will be peace among nations—and not till then.

On Strikes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt's preparedness program is on. Every effort is being made for a united front. It is regrettable at this time carpenters struck against building laborers nailing a few grimy wooden braces on plasterers' scaffold which they have been doing for a hundred years.

Hitler said that to corrupt a nation we shall find men in every country, we shall not need to bribe them, they will come of their own accord.

3 Cents for Defense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Seeking relief from the heat, I went to a theater yesterday. There was a sign at the boxoffice, "Admission 25 cents, Defense Tax 3 cents." I paid my 28 cents and entered. And then, unexpectedly, a wave of shame surged over me. Twenty-five cents for my own pleasure, a measly 3 cents to defend my homeland! So it's worth 3 cents to live in a land of democratic institutions, a land of free press and free religion, a land where no man, however humble, is considered but a cog in an unfeeling machine!

We Americans are selfish. Far too much do we live for ourselves alone. God forgive us and show us the light.

Another Booth

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On page 6 of this morning's Post, in "The New Yorker," by Leonard Lyons, there appears the following statement regarding the play, "The Man Who Killed Lincoln:" "Lincoln admirers were to kidnap Richard Waring, the actor who portrayed EDWIN Booth." How can anyone be so ignorant!

Is German Efficiency Efficient?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Chancellor Hitler's latest speech to the Reichstag praised the efficiency of the German infantry and airforce, as proved by their whirlwind success. It is utter folly to deny or belittle his claims. To achieve this efficiency the German people have devoted themselves body and soul for many years. They have followed painstakingly the example of their own Faust in willingness to sell their souls to attain their end.

But is it worth while and are Hitler's Germans truly efficient? They can make war as no other men; they cannot make peace. Wherever they conquer they bring misery and death, ruin, lifelong suffering, degradation of all that is best in men. Is this in fact efficiency? At most, it is the efficiency of wrecking crews who pull down sound and beautiful structures which they cannot rebuild or adequately replace. Let us not be fooled into giving it our admiration.

In October, 1938, I was in Eger when Hitler entered the town and was received with frantic enthusiasm by the naive Sudeten Germans; a few weeks later I saw Vienna which had been nine months under his domination. It was a nightmare; only the very young and thoughtless could still smile. A general hush-hush atmosphere prevailed. The dreary gloom which hateful acts and hatred inevitably produce had invaded every street and plaza; the charm which once acted as a magnet to attract world travel was wholly gone. The same thing is happening throughout Europe today.

I am glad the radio translation of Hitler's speech, deliberately English in manner, was accompanied by Hitler's own frantic oratory which sufficiently reveals the man. With persistent emphasis he recited the great deeds of his generals and soldiers, but most ungratefully he neglected to praise the devoted Fifth Column. Is it possible he is ashamed to admit his monstrous debt to them?

Hitler's speech was for consumption in both Axis and non-Axis countries. Its aim so far as the United States is concerned was to make us condemn the British for not accepting what he calls his "peace offer" or at least asking its terms. But of what use would that be? Why should the British help on his way a man who makes pledges only to break them, when the breaking will do most harm? Does he really believe we do not yet understand his technique?

We Americans need to inquire into the sources of our own strength. Our land was discovered by a Latin; it was settled most successfully by the British and the Dutch. Its cherished institutions, its liberties are almost entirely English in origin. There is nothing very like them today in any but English-speaking countries. Their support in our own 48 States depends largely on our requirement that English be not only the official language but the common speech of our citizens as taught in our great public schools. Common speech and common tradition are learned together.

The time is at hand when all English-speaking peoples must unite the world over to protect the institutions, the liberties which we love and by which we live, against a bold, powerful attempt to destroy them. We must act now or forever after hold our peace—in servile submission to Hitler or to men he would approve and the ideas they foster. That would mean good-by to the America of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, the two Roosevelts and our own better selves.

Shall we let this happen through apathy, blindness, pique? Even if we like individual Germans, Italians, Japanese, do we want the Axis peoples to spill over all Europe and all the world, extinguishing every lamp of life except their own? No amount of armament ready three years hence will save us from being Hitlerized if we fail now to do all in our power to defend, wherever it is threatened, the hard-won right of English-speaking peoples to be free.

G. O. P. Speeches

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just before the Republican National Convention, I listened to speeches over the air by men who aspire to be President of the United States. And—shades of Abraham Lincoln—it seemed to me that just anybody can call himself a Republican today. I could not help comparing these men with two great Republicans of all times—Abe Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt—two who stood for truth and right come hell or high water.

I just cannot imagine whom the speakers, representing the Republican Party, thought they were addressing. Certainly, it was not the average American people—because, regardless of whatever class, they not only have minds of their own but are aided and are abetted by the radio as to what has been said and what has been done—and by whom.

Nor can I understand how men of high education, believing themselves to be qualified in all respects to be President, can think for one moment that they can climb to this high honor on twisted facts and the defamation of another man who has made good to his people—President Roosevelt.

As I listened, they seemed to acquire the semblance of wolves kept too long from the feast. All forgetting that regardless of which party a man belongs to, if he has the mental caliber and his plans and policies are constructive and, above all else, he is sincere and has a regard for truth, "the people" will know. Because truth is convincing.

Sensational Heat

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I hope The Post is not entering the class of papers that features sensational matters of interest only to the masses whose minds seem to be pervaded by pessimism.

Take a look at the paper for Monday, July 22, 1940. The front page is scorching with the heat—the very thing The Post's select type of subscriber is trying to forget.

The lover of the symphony likes to relax and read about the concert if he cannot actually attend. But when he opens the second section of Monday's paper he sees three pictures centering around how hot it was at the concert, entitled "Sweltering Symphony."

Would it not be better to elevate the popular thought to your newspaper's standards than to stoop to headlining the none-too-helpful reminder that it is hot?

Was Disgusted

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has always been my desire and aim when I reach the time in life where I will not have to worry about the wherewithal for a modest living, to return to my home town, and in my small way assist those who are making such a valiant effort toward cleaner politics. After listening to the Democratic Convention over the radio, I am thoroughly satisfied that I would not care to have a hand in politics if that is the way the game is played. It was so offensive to the sensibilities that many to whom I have spoken stated that they shut their radios off. All of the people of the United States are not so disinterested that they will not be able to distinguish a clean campaign from a smear, if so it turns out to be, subtle or otherwise. Pistola Vs. Knife

Pobrecita pistola!" declared Paco. "Those poor leetle pistol gun!"

Paco carried a knife, which is the inalienable right of any Mexican to do. This knife and a pair of leathern boots (stripped from a dead charro's feet) were Paco's most priceless possessions. Except for cotton pantaloons, straw sombrero, sleeveless camisa and an alligator-skin wristband—indeed, they were practically his only possessions.

Paco's knife amused the American foot tourist. He knew it was generally worn somewhere on the Indio's person, asleep or awake. That knife had been fashioned from a broad, flat file by the tedious process of grinding it to shape between two stones. A bone handle long enough to fit two hands at one time had been riveted to the blade. Long, sharp, deadly, that knife weighed 4 pounds.

Paco might have been Toltec, Aztec, Huichol or Colhua. But his big, wide nose and cruel-looking lips suggested Yaqui. His monster knife, his dead man's boots worn with pride, his appearance of cunning and ruthlessness, marked him a renegade. Yet Paco was as gentle as a puppy. He had the heart of a child.

They—Paco the Indio, an American tourist afoot and a burro called Lady Oppington—were three days' trek east of Mazatlan, Mexico.

The American tourist carried a Luger pistol, Paco his loved but deadly navaja, Lady Oppington a huge pack of canned grub. Thus they were climbing steadily along a borderland of Mexico's enchanted forest and the base of stupendous mountains.

Here were a few parakeets and parrots and signs of that great spotted cat called el tigre, the jaguar. Mountain lion and American puma smell lay ahead, but Lady Oppington showed no nervousness as she plodded a hundred yards to the rear. Behind lay beaten highways, one leading north to Guaymas, the other south to Tepic and Guadalajara, regular tourist routes.

Hollows and dense undergrowth indicated a habitat here of North America's—as well as Mexico's—most dangerous wild animal. This was the peccary, a species of hog.

Usually the peccary foraged in droves. Sometimes they were found in pairs. Peccary, when aroused, have been known to tear a man, a horse, or both, into pieces and eat the fragments, bones included, in about the same space of time that a cat requires to consume a small rat. It is not considered hard to arouse the peccary, either.

"That pobrecita pistola," repeated Paco, scornfully indicating the American's Luger. "She makes wan, two, three pretty pops, si. Seguramente, no? But wat is the happen then? Those so leetle boolets they sting plenty. They enrage, el enemigo, she chase you. You climb a tree, eh"

It was the time-worn argument of Mexico as to which is the better weapon of defense, the knife cleverly thrown or the gun pistola.

"I might climb a tree," retorted the tourist to his guide, a competent man who had been secured at Mazatlan to take the place of one Beto who had decided to become a general and, possibly, Presidente some day. "I might climb a tree," he said, "where I could shoot at the enemy a hundred times. But you, Paco, have but one knife to throw."

"Wan knife to throw, you say, patron?" admitted the Indio. "Ah! Yet I am never miss el enemigo. I'm every time hit the—w'at you call—the mark, mi patron. Pancho (name bestowed on the glittering knife), she is wan amigo who does not fail Paco—me!"

"You are a confident sort of cuss, Paco."

"Si. Some day there comes along a beeg enemigo. Mebbyso she is wan enemy man, mebbyso el tigre. I cannot say. W'at happen is muy queek. Mi arm, mi hand, she move so fast. Ay de mi, senor! Like lightning. Hola! Those enemigo are dead pronto."

"My pistol once killed el tigre," argued the American.

"I have a way of making this—what you call my pobrecita pistola—better than any knife." The American drew his hard-shooting weapon as they entered a cool glen. With his own knife he split the nose of a bullet in the form of a cross, then carefully inserted the mutilated shell into the chamber. "With this," he stated, "I can knock down a small tree."

"Si, mi patron. I know." The Indio shrugged. "Pues, mi knife Pancho, she is moch better, no?"

"Mira. Look." Suddenly Paco stiffened. With a movement incredibly rapid he snatched his beloved knife from open camisa, point foremost, and flung it at a log-colored creature, lying asleep beside a spring a few yards to the right. His motion was like that of a baseball pitcher on the mound delivering a perfect strike. The knife sped true, turned over once only, and struck with a thud. Perhaps a thousand pounds of energy was behind the blow.

The peccary—for it was indeed a peccary—squealed hoarsely.

"See!"

Paco still grinned as he started forward to recover the muerto knife. He made only two steps in that direction, however. Another peccary, probably a mate of the dead animal, fearfully slavering, murderous tusks bare, hurled itself at Paco from the underbrush.

Paco, knifeless, raced for the nearest madrone tree, a score of feet away. The raging, screaming peccary was at his heels. That beast, swift as a race horse, had the advantage of an early start. Paco could never reach safety of the madrone branches in the split second allowed him.

The American foot tourist fired just as those bone-crunching jaws of the hog were reaching for Paco. The dum-dum bullet struck heavily behind a foreleg. The wild peccary stumbled, went down in a shower of gravel along with Paco, the latter fortunately unhurt.

A moment later Paco was grinning again—sheepishly.

"Por Dios, mi patron," he stated fervently, "I t'eenk you are ver' smart caballero. Me—I'm loco, you bet. I must queek those pretty pobrecita pistola learn to es-shoot, no? Today. Now. "Si, si!"

Start Of 'High Level' Campaign

A CRITICAL QUESTION concerning the Democratic national campaign is now being decided, half consciously and half unconsciously. It is whether the campaign will be fought on a high level or a low level. More particularly, it is whether the President's part in the campaign will be at a high level or a low level.

A campaign at a high level would appear to be required by the nomination of the President for a third term. In my firm view, only an international crisis which has brought this Nation to the threshold of one of the most serious periods in its history impelled him to consent to run again. Only such a crisis can justify in the minds of many voters a departure from the no-third-term tradition.

SENATOR WHEELER
"Indubitable Patriotism"

National unity, total defense—the ideas which imply that a concerted national effort is imperative—are to be the keynotes of the President's campaign, as it has been envisioned by some of his starry-eyed aides and well-wishers. The President himself, in his acceptance speech, struck these notes. He emphasized that he would be too busy with Presidential duties of the highest importance to the Nation to spare the time for a campaign of the customary type.

THE CAMPAIGN preliminaries so far, however, have not sustained a high note. Near the end of his acceptance speech, the President plastered the label "appeaser Fifth Columnists" on those who have not been in full agreement with his foreign policy. This was a slur on the indubitable patriotism of such men as the late Senator Borah, Senator Wheeler, Senator Vandenberg and many others. It put a sour taste in the mouths of a number of delegates who had been strongly for a third term and left the President's acceptance speech, taken as a whole, several scales below the simple patriotic note struck by Mrs. Roosevelt earlier the same evening. Indeed, Mrs. Roosevelt was the only speaker at the Democratic National Convention who lifted the thoughts of the delegates and audience above the level of partisan and factional politics.

Then, at his press conference Tuesday, the President himself answered the "bolts" of Senator Burke, Lewis W. Douglas, John W. Hanes and former Senator Reed. As the President said, they were old bolters—with the exception of Hanes. Whatever political weight they have — which isn't much—was thrown into the scales against Roosevelt in 1936, along with the weight of Al Smith, John W. Davis, Jouett Shouse, John J. Raskob, and other prominent Democrats.

That the President deigned to comment on these bolts came as a sharp surprise to some of his lieutenants in Washington, especially since his comments were not in the lofty tones which they felt that his role requires. The President's counterattack on Reed alluded to a "sweat-shop" matter—a wage-hour case involving his wife's dress factory. It was a reply in the manner of Reed, who is noted for his invective, but not, in the eyes of some White House lieutenants, in the manner of a President, whose time and thoughts are supposed to be devoted only to such matters of overwhelming national interest as foreign policy and the defense program.

MEANWHILE, in Washington a handful of New Dealers are boasting that the Chicago convention witnessed the ultimate success of the "purge" of 1938. In a sense that is so: the Democratic national ticket is progressive and, to Democrats who adhere to the curious tenet that anyone who is not born a Democrat can never become one, it cuts across party lines. But Wallace did not support the "purge" of 1938, and since then, until recently, he has been treated almost as a traitor by some of the New Dealers who are now proclaiming his nomination as their achievement. And from this same group the final volleys of shrapnel are being fired at the retiring back of Jim Farley.

All this does not add up to national unity, total defense, patriotism, or anything else loftier than spiteful factional politics.

In behalf of the President's comment on the bolters, it must be pointed out that no one else was immediately available to make the reply. Normally this is the sort of comment which should be left to the chairman of the National Committee. But Farley is set on retiring, and the national headquarters staff has not yet been reorganized under new leadership.

IF WALLACE were a different kind of man, he might assume the burden of conducting the campaign on the lower and more partisan level. His own thoughts tend toward the heights, however. Over seven years his speeches have revealed tolerance and broad sympathies. He will conduct a vigorous campaign, but if it is consistent with his character, it will be free of invective and slurs on those who disagree with him.

SENATOR BURKE
Roosevelt Said He Was an Old Bolter

Politics being what it is, even in a time of crisis, some prominent Democrat will have to be found, presumably to trade epithets with the Republicans. Otherwise the task will revert to the President, with fatal consequences to the ideals of national unity and high patriotism with which many of his friends believe that his campaign must be associated if it is to be successful—or is to deserve success.

Betrayal Of Trust

YESTERDAY'S contribution to the sum of wisdom revealed that Joseph Ozanic, the president of the Progressive Mine Workers, of the American Federation of Labor, was convicted of bootlegging in the Federal court at Springfield, Ill., in 1924 and 1925, and that the present United States district attorney there is proceeding against him to collect $550 which Mr. Ozanic still owes the Government on two fines. District Attorney Howard Doyle says Mr. Ozanic served three months in the Springfield city jail for his part in the great popular rebellion against the foul amendment, and there may be those who, remembering the temper of those times, will be more likely to honor than condemn Mr. Ozanic.

Less chivalrous, however, was the part played in the people's protest against prohibition by Mr. John Dempsey, who, on April 22, 1925, pleaded guilty to two charges of conspiracy in the United States District Court, in Cincinnati, and was fined $1,000, no part of which has been paid to this day.

Mr. Dempsey is now the international treasurer of the International Union of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, with headquarters in St. Louis, a position of great responsibility and power, and one which obviously calls for the highest moral character.

MR. DEMPSEY'S part in the case, which resulted in the imposition of the fine, involved a serious betrayal of public trust. He was a policeman on the Cincinnati force at a time when graft was rife in the department, and he was one of 30 policemen who were caught by Federal investigators in a systematic shakedown of bootleggers.

Most of the faithless cops pleaded guilty, a few were convicted and Mr. Dempsey turned State's evidence, a copper who hollered copper on the cops. He, too, pleaded guilty, but, in return for his assistance, the court, in imposing the fine, refrained from ordering that he should stand committed until it should be paid. Mr. Dempsey thus was permitted to walk out of court free to hew out a career for himself in the leadership of the American Federation of Labor, bringing to the service of labor with a capital L a character which had been capable of violating a solemn trust for personal gain and of violating the trust of his fellow conspirators for personal advantage, at their expense.

Removed from the police department, Mr. Dempsey returned to his trade, structural iron work, and became active in union affairs in Cincinnati. He soon rose to the position of business agent of local No. 44, in Cincinnati, and became a power in the Central Labor Council, an organization which unblushingly, indeed, proudly embraces the local offshoots of the crooked Building Service Employes' Union and the crooked Stagehands' and Theatrical Employes' Union.

AS TO WHETHER Mr. Dempsey still owes the $1,000 fine in the sense that he can be compelled to pay it, there is no doubt. The fine still stands against him on the record in the office of the clerk of the United States District Court, and no statute of limitations can run against it. In similar cases, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been employed to determine the present ability of the convicted persons to pay their fines. If the FBI reports evidence that the person is now able to pay, the civil division of the Department of Justice starts a civil suit for the money.

But because the judge failed to order that Dempsey stand committed, a complication occurred. When a convicted person is committed he must serve 30 days in jail before he may obtain his freedom by filing the pauper's oath. If he is liberated after 30 days by this process, however, he still remains liable for the full sum of the fine, if and when he acquires sufficient money to pay it.

IT WOULD SEEM that Mr. Dempsey's fine was seriously intended to be a fine, for there is nothing to suggest that the court was only fooling. But, in the meantime, he has risen to such prominence and power in the councils of the American Federation of Labor that there may be some hesitancy to insist on payment. Indeed, it is considered indelicate even to remind Mr. Dempsey of the fine and the events leading up to it, and the Central Labor Council of Cincinnati, an organization somewhat given to bulldozing on the false representation that it speaks for the rank and file of labor, surely will denounce this revelation as another attempt to discredit the leadership of certain A. F. of L. unions, which is exactly what it is.

Against such protests, however, it will be necessary to consider the cheers of rank and file members of the Iron Workers' Union, which is not, as the leaders undoubtedly will insist, just one great happy family.

This England

WORDS, AS Mrs. Miniver says, are the only net to catch a mood, but most words are nets with large holes in them. Jan Struther's "Mrs. Miniver" (Harcourt, $2), a series of deceptively simple sketches which first appeared in The Times, of London, is fine-meshed.

Much of the fun of parenthood, Mrs. Miniver also says—and you can't help quoting her—lies in watching the children remake, with delighted wonder, one's own discoveries; and much of the fun of reading "Mrs. Miniver" lies in the delight of sudden recognition. Mrs. Miniver is beautifully aware of the profundity and universality of trivialities.

Mrs. Miniver is fortyish, the mother of three children, two boys and a girl, and the wife of an architect, with a house in London and Starlings out in Kent. (Jan Struther was born Joyce Anstruther, is married to Anthony Maxtone-Graham, and has three children, two boys and a girl; she is, according to Frank Morley, "about size 14, slight, dark, and easy to get on with," and I presume she has a house in London and a place in Kent.) She lives a very British life, visiting, once a year, Lady Chervil, of Chervil Court, Crampton, and having crumpets at tea; she passes the cab rank on her way to the pillar box and has things called face flannels and bogmanay at home. But even if she did not take in "The New Yorker" and recognize Helen Hokinson types on every street, even if her children did not play with Walt Disney masks and sing "A Bicycle Built for Two" and "Carry Me Home (sic) to Old Virginny" you would recognize Mrs. Miniver anywhere. She is a civilized modern woman, with more gift for expression than most.

She liked her children; but she knew that the cream of marriage was the nightly turning out of a pocketful of the day's memories, after the children had been put to bed or the guests had gone. Just as sometimes, dining out, and catching Clem's eye across the table, Mrs. Miniver realized that the most important thing about marriage was neither home nor children, but simply there being always an eye to catch. And, for all her constancy, she had another, deeper wisdom. When she and Clem, neither of whom could have borne a serious thought of deserting Starlings, were flirting with a new house down the road, Mrs. Miniver understood their own restlessness. It was a state, she remarked, as natural in the sphere of house property as it is in that of human relationships, but which those who do not share are apt to mistake for inconstancy; it was just a very enjoyable and pretty shameless flirtation, and when they were done with the new house they would probably marry it off to one of their friends.

Judy, too, had intuitions. She did not like Marigold Thompson's mother.

"Why not?" asked Mrs. Miniver. "She's frightfully fond of children."

"I know," said Judy. "She told me so. But you see, when people are frightfully fond of children you never know whether they really like you or not, do you?"

Marigold, however, liked Mrs. Miniver. Judy reported: "She says you always leave people alone."

I DON'T KNOW what Mrs. Miniver's politics are, and that is one of the pleasant things about her book. She seems to be a bit bored by women who think that for a kitchen maid to use face powder is the beginning of Bolshevism, and men who regard a speed limit for automobiles as the thin end of totalitarianism, which many suggest that she is, to say the least, pink. Yet she also had a decent toryish respect for the art of conversation; she thinks it well to give ideas time to flower, instead of pulling the wretched little things in half-sentences just to see how they are growing. She is momentarily exalted about the spirit of England in wartime; yet, walking in Kensington Gardens in midsummer, when only the slum children were left in London, the rebel thought came to her that for most of those children the only hope of seeing cows, and running streams, and growing corn, lay in the collective generosity which so many good people insist must be strictly limited to wartime.

There isn't much war in "Mrs. Miniver." But you can't help thinking of bombs falling in Kent, and on London, as you read it. (In fact, Jan Struther has just brought her children to America.) The book wasn't written for America; there isn't a word of propaganda in it. Yet, reading it, you understand why the poets have written so many of their loveliest lines about "this England."

If the Speakers Had Been Honest

Gentlemen of the Convention:

I know very well my candidate hasn't the chance of a blowfly in a blizzard, but I have worked on this nominating speech all year and I do not propose to sidetrack it now. I call on you to grin and bear it. If you consider this asking too much, then I will grin and you can bear it. America stands at the crossroads, and if you have heard that one before don't stop me. This is a critical moment. And if that be plagiarism make the most of it.

The need of America at this moment is a man who has the looks of a Gable, the voice of Experience, the physique of a Galento, the appeal of a Pot of Gold program and the brains of my candidate. America is calling for a leader who has qualified himself by radio technique, platform manner and fishing performance to lead this great Nation. It is calling for a leader who screens well and sounds even better. It demands a man who will wear Indian features and give every steam shovel a break.

We want a man who can throw right or left handed, and strike a good pitching pose until the ball game photographers are satisfied. We want a man who can fool all the newspapers some of the time, some of the newspapers all the time and all the radio commentators all the time!

My candidate is a man who has known the bitter hardships of adversity. He was nearly 19 years old before he got his picture in a newsreel mob scene and not until he was almost 28 years of age did he get a chance to tell the front from the back of a microphone. But did these handicaps daunt him? Did this life of neglect chill his spirit? Was he licked by the fact he lived in a town so small it didn't have a local radio station? A thousand times no!

My candidate is a man of humble beginnings. His mother was never mentioned in a tabloid in her life. She had 11 children without any forecast, prophecy or public announcement.

His father went his lowly way through life without once attaining publicity as a holder of a sweepstakes ticket under the name of "Come to Papa" or "Baby Needs Shoes." Never in his life did he make a quiz program by accident or design.

The man I am about to nominate was born and raised in a home which never had more than one automobile at a time, and where the burden of poverty had reached a depth which made him walk to school. He was so poor in his boyhood that when he took the family auto for a week-end trip he had to ask his old man to buy the gas.

He was in his fourth year in college before he realized that voice throwing could spell progress and that everything in the American success story depended on proper accoustics and a coast-to-coast network. Ah, my friends, he had much to contend with, but once he got the hang of things he grabbed the ball, phoned for the cameramen, hired a press agent and went forth to serve his country.

He is qualified by experience, by training, by education, by ambition, by desire and by the inconquerable yen for public prominence to head this ticket. And on top of that, he needs the money.

Gentlemen of the convention, I give you that sterling patriot, that intrepid leader, that great American . . . Elmer Twitchell. And I don't want him back.

Refugees

Lord, help the frightened children,
And keep them brave, who go
Into the homes of strangers,
Whose ways they do not know.

Lord, help the ones who take them
And make them understand
The little children's vagaries,
Bred in a different land.

May there be love and patience
To help them in their need;
That they shall know forever
That Christ is risen indeed.

Orphans Of The Storm

The New World Colonies

Havana.

IN AN EARLIER dispatch it was pointed out that the meeting of American foreign ministers being held in this city would go down in history either as a resounding success or a flat failure, depending, very largely, on what action is taken with regard to the American colonies of European states that have been or may be overrun by aggressors.

By action of Congress, the United States is already clearly on record as opposed to any transfer of sovereignty over any region in this unilateral declaration of policy, albeit by the most powerful nation of the western world. It commits no other American republic to a similar stand. Above all, it is entirely negative in its nature. It does not answer the question of what is to be done with the colonies and possessions of European powers if the ban on transfer of sovereignty is enforced.

THIS QUESTION the meeting being held here is called upon to answer. Three lines of action are open. The first would be the taking over by the United States of the American colonies left more or less stranded by the war. The justification of such an action would be that the strategic importance of those colonies is, in certain instances, so great that unless they fall into our hands they might serve as the instruments of the totalitarian powers with which to carry out aggressions on this side of the Atlantic.

Such unilateral action by this Nation, however, whether justified or not, and on whatever grounds justified, would be used by other nations to excuse past and future acts of aggression. Moreover, all elements in Latin America that are actively or latently hostile to the United States would be prompted by such a move to denounce Yankee imperialism.

ANOTHER POSSIBLE line of action would be to parcel out orphaned European colonies among the nations in this hemisphere which for strategic or geographic reasons can lay a particular claim to them.

It is no secret, for instance, that Brazil would not be averse to falling heir to the Guianas should Great Britain, France and the Netherlands prove incapable of exercising effective sovereignty over those colonies. Venezuela, on the other hand, has a particular interest in the fate of Aruba and Curacao, where there are important refineries; Argentina in that of the Falkland Islands, which the Buenos Aires government has always claimed is Argentine territory; Guatemala and Honduras in the fate of British Honduras. On the other hand, the proximity of the French, British and Dutch West Indies to the Panama Canal and the approaches to the Panama Canal means that the United States cannot afford to allow those islands to fall into unfriendly hands. But if imperialistic expansion is bad for the United States goose it is equally objectionable when undertaken by Latin-American ganders.

CONSIDERATION of this kind, plus the belief that Pan-American solidiarity is now more than a banquet phrase, have given impetus to the suggestion that the fate of the European colonies of this hemisphere is of concern to all the American republics and should be decided by all of them as a group. In particular, the idea of trusteeship for those colonies has taken root.

First advanced by Cuba, the idea received powerful impetus at this conference in Secretary Hull's opening speech of last Monday. It cannot yet be said that all the nations of the New World are agreed as to the form that trusteeship should take. Nor are all of them prepared to take a positive stand in favor of such a course. Nonetheless the exchange of views which occurred on this subject in the weeks prior to the opening of the Havana meeting and at the conference itself has resulted in an encouraging clarification of views. Something like a plan of action is beginning to emerge from the deliberations at Havana, and that plan, representing the confluence of several streams of ideas originating in a number of nations, holds immense possibilities for good. It is not too much to say that we may be at the threshold of a new American system of security, with the collective trusteeship over the colonies of European nations that have been overrun by aggressors as its keystone.

HOW THE plan will finally look after the delegates to the present inter-American parley get through with it, is not entirely clear. There are many hurdles which have to be overcome before the plan can have clear sailing. It is nonetheless significant that the idea of collective trusteeship is no longer a nebulous one, but has assumed form and substance. For instance, it appears to be the view of several delegations that it is not only necessary to extend the mantle of protection to colonies subject to transfer from one non-American nation to another, but also to those where the nation that is nominally sovereign has, by force of circumstance, become the tool of an aggressor power. It is also felt that in establishing a system of trusteeship the American nations must by word and deed make it clear that such action will not imply any intention or purpose of territorial aggrandizement and that it will be temporary in nature.

In other words the period of trusteeship will extend only until the time when the colony or colonies can be returned to its former sovereign or be allowed to become independent. It is also of very great significance that the trusteeship plan now being given the most attentive consideration would involve the active participation, not of all the nations of this hemisphere, but only of those willing to help operate it, and that in every instance a colony found subject to trusteeship would be administered by a commission consisting of nationals of three separate nations. In other words, these nations who, out of fear, timidity, or just plain lack of interest do not want to take a stand on the trusteeship issue will, under this plan, be able to avoid doing so without preventing the plan from coming into force.

Despite its sorry fate, the mandate system established under the covenant of the League of Nations and operated under League supervision had much to recommend it. Such a mandate system as is now being discussed at Havana would have most of the advantages and few of the disadvantages of the League type. Aside from the circumstance that it would meet an increasingly serious strategic danger head on it would, if put into effect, bring into being the most far-reaching and constructive system of inter-American cooperation ever devised. Events are moving fast here at Havana.

Contrast: Polar Work at 71 Below

Working in temperature 71 degrees below zero while studying auroral displays 15 miles east of Little America in the Antarctica, a small party from the United States Antarctic Service has returned safely to East Base, the Navy Department reported yesterday.

The party made 25 photographs of Aurora Australis, or southern lights.

Dr. Paul A. Siple, East Base leader, reported none of the men suffered any ill effects either from extreme temperature or from subsisting entirely on pemmican and similar food concentrates.

Mrs. Dunbar Urges Scholarship Ties To Latin-America

A thousand exchange scholarships for North and South American students was recommended yesterday by Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, as an insurance policy for peace.

Mrs. Dunbar, who had just returned to federation headquarters, 1734 N street, after the seven weeks' "good neighbor tour" of South America, made by a party of 25 federation members, said they were all convinced of the need for closer cultural relations between the Americas.

She made this statement Tuesday night at a dinner given in honor of the party immediately after the members had arrived in New York, at Inter-American House of the World's Fair. As a result, a $1,000 scholarship for a South American girl to study in this country, was given by Thomas J. Watson, president of the board of Inter-American House.

Transport Sails To Take Refugees From Finland

New York, July 25 (AP).—The Army transport American Legion, under orders of President Roosevelt, sailed late today for the Finnish Arctic port of Petsamo to remove stranded Americans.

Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, said in Washington he understood Mrs. Daisy Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway would return on the 13,736-ton transport, and that the United States Ministers to Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia, Baltic states absorbed by Russia, also might use the vessel.

As Petsamo is in the belligerent zone warring nations have been advised of the sailing and of the course the vessel will take.

Nazis Imprison Dutch Hostages As 'Reprisals'

The Hague, July 25 (U.P.).—Several hundred Dutch men and women have been seized as hostages and sent to concentration camps in Germany in "reprisal" for the alleged mistreatment of German subjects in the Dutch East and West Indies, Nazi authorities said today.

The reprisals will be intensified with hundreds of additional arrests until the refugee Dutch government in London and its colonial authorities release the interned Germans and "change their policies," the announcement said.

Reprisals also will be taken against British business concerns in Holland if "British aviators continue to bomb Dutch homes" in Nazi-held Holland, it was stated.

In British air raids on Holland yesterday six civilians were killed and many wounded, ten of them severely, it was claimed.

Child Refugee Thanks Red Cross For Assistance

The plight of England's children facing a blitzkrieg was brought home to the American Red Cross yesterday with a letter from an English evacuee child, beneficiary of Red Cross aid.

"We little evacuees now are in a reception area away from the bombing of the big towns," a youngster wrote. "Over a hundred of us came out at first, but now we have crept down to 30. I have my mother with me so I am very lucky, don't you think? Thank you for sending the dresses."

Relief supplies from the Red Cross are now being rushed to England at the rate of 850,000 pounds daily and $3,500,230 has been expended for British war relief by the organization to date, Chairman Norman Davis announced.

Cardenas Will Decide Congress That Is 'Legal'

Mexico City, July 25 (AP).—President Lazaro Cardenas himself, the government announced today, will decide which of the country's two prospective "congresses" is legal by appearing before one or the other to read his Presidential message September 1.

After the Presidential election early this month both the administration candidate, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, and the opposition candidate, Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, claimed a majority. Almazan said that if his elected supporters were not admitted to Congress they would meet as a Congress anyway.

Odd Jobs

She Signs the President's Name

By George Thorpe

MISS Jeanne Kavanagh, 23, of 3002 Rodman street northwest, is one of the prettiest girls in the Department of Interior. She is also one of the two persons in the world entitled to sign the name, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The tireless pen of the Secretary to the President for the Signing of Land Office Patents (that's her official title) has affixed the famous name to thousands of state documents, granting to as many Americans the sesame to ownership of this country's soil.

But Miss Kavanagh is no longer overawed by her prerogative. She feels she is important mainly as a means of preventing chronic Presidential writer's cramp.

ACTUALLY, she is a cog of no little importance in the Federal machinery. Without the Chief Executive's signature all land patents, or titles, would be null and void. But should he sign the multitude of papers personally he would have little time for matters of state.

In turning out as many as 200 new patents, homestead grants and title transfers daily, Miss Kavanagh employs a two-for-a-penny stub pen and a change-of-pace technique—in this manner:

Let us assume she is about to tackle one of the typical land patents beginning "whereas, a certificate of the Register of the Land Office" and ending, "In testimony whereof, I, President of the United States of America . . ."

Jeanne Kavanagh as she signs the President's name

ON a given line she writes slowly and carefully Franklin D. Roosevelt, then more hurriedly below it Jeanne Kavanagh.

This self-effacing practice nevertheless once brought a kick-back from a land office clerk in a small Western town, who had apparently been unable to decipher her name. He wrote:

"I have read in the newspapers that Franklin D. Roosevelt is President but who's this other New Dealer . . . somebody with a 'passion for anonymity'?"

Baffling to Miss Kavanagh was the way in which she was inducted into her unique job three years ago.

Having applied for one of the run-of-the-mill stenographic positions in the Interior Department three years ago, she was unprepared for the ceremonious reception accorded her in a series of personnel interviews.

USHERED into official sancta ahead of lengthy lines of job seekers, she was given audiences worthy of visiting foreign office emissaries, and conversations were punctuated by assurances that "we hope you'll be happy here."

The would-be stenographer was completely bewildered until inquiries revealed she was actually to be secretary to the President, jointly under the White House and Interior Department.

Now things are slightly different. She is under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Land Office with a civil service rating. She isn't sure about her status in case of a change of Administration but reasons that with practice she could sign Wendell L. Willkie with the same facility as Franklin D. Roosevelt.

British Navy To Blockade All Europe

Spanish and Portugal Coasts to Be Dominated By English Navy

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 25.—The British are about to impose the most drastic blockade in the history of modern warfare. The government is about to issue regulations which will provide that any ship sailing for Europe will be arrested and taken to a British prize court unless it sails with a navicert.

A navicert is only issued by a British consul or other British authority after the shipper has proved to the satisfaction of the British that the cargo will not go beyond the country to which it is shipped. Any ship approaching European shores without a certificate to this effect will be captured by the British and treated as a prize. Even if a part of the cargo is covered by a navicert and the rest is not, the British still will treat the whole cargo as a prize.

The British emphasize that this blockade is not to be imposed on Spain or Portugal alone. It is, in fact, a blockade of the whole of Europe and it will be imposed in the strictest fashion. Portugal and Spain, as the last free countries with an Atlantic seaboard, may feel its effect. Nevertheless, the British insist the new blockade does not imply a reduction of the necessary supplies from abroad for either Spain or Portugal or, indeed, any other free country in Europe.

Navicerts will be issued covering all the needs of any country still free from the German yoke, it is said. Navicerts will not be issued for any more goods than that, for the simple reason that the British, as long as they control the sea, do not intend to allow anything to reach Europe which can be used by the German war machine.

U. S. May Name New Control Zone

London, July 25 (U.P.).—Britain will extend her blockade to Spain and Portugal next week, thereby bringing all continental Europe within the scope of her naval control, it was stated reliably tonight.

It was believed certain that the expected British action would result in designation by the United States of a new combat zone under the neutrality act.

Are you a heliophobe? There are 10,000,000 of them in this country, and they annually cause the loss of $1,400,000 and 200,000 working days.

A heliophobe is a person whose skin will redden, blister and burn, but never tan, according to Dr. Charles F. Pabst, Brooklyn dermatologist, who issued a warning to all heliophobes yesterday in his annual ten tan commandments.

Don't sleep, drink, play cards, read, or sprinkle perfume on the skin under strong sunlight, was the content of the commandments. They apply particularly to blondes and redheads, who, says Dr. Pabst, make the best heliophobes.

Shoes and Clothing Shipped to Britain

The Bundles for Britain organization announced yesterday that 4,103 articles of worn shoes and clothing had been shipped to England since the opening of the District branch on May 20. Also sent were 1,070 wool knitted garments for men.

Bundles for Britain, of which Mrs. Winston Churchill is honorary sponsor, is located at 1331 Connecticut avenue and is open from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. daily except Saturday. After Labor Day the branch will remain open on Saturdays.

named Shaw, dived from one of the lifeboats and hauled the captain to safety.

"Two bombs struck the ship, the second catching her amidships, and oil poured into the water.

"The bombers came low and dropped incendiary bombs apparently to set fire to the oil on the water and scald the men floundering there. They also machine-gunned the men.

"Boats came out from shore and I was picked up by one of them after being in the water something like an hour."

Many survivors have returned to the sea after a brief leave.

Frank Golightly, a Salvation Army major, said there were some women of his organization aboard, members of the Y. M. C. A. and civilian refugees.

A cook, who asserted there were 16 civilians aboard, said he saw one soldier grab a young girl, whose legs were broken, and swim with her until both were picked up. She died later.

First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander announced the sinking of the Meknes to the House of Commons after noting that the German high command had claimed it as an "18,000-ton merchantman."

The ship, he said, was a blaze of light, flying the French tri-color, with the French flag painted vividly on her deck and sides. Yet, he said, his voice rising: "The Meknes was torpedoed by a motorboat at 10:30 last night. Pessengers and crew were given five minutes to take to the boats but each time she tried to signal her name she was again fired on and sank in four or five minutes."

About 950 Meknes survivors, 15 seriously injured, were landed on the English south coast tonight. Some said they understood the Meknes had been guaranteed safe passage by the Germans.

"In spite of that the first notice we got was three bursts of machine-gun fire and shots from a small cannon," said one of them. "We sounded our siren to let the motor boat know this was not an enemy ship. The next thing was the torpedo.

"There was a rush for the boats, and they were overcrowded. The rafts were too heavy to get over the side quickly. All we could do was jump for it, and wait.

"A lot of people were killed when the boiler exploded. Then we were machine-gunned in the water. After a while the British warships picked us up."

Rayburn, Sumners to Confer

Majority Leader Rayburn yesterday declined to predict what action the House may take if the Judiciary Committee reports the Sumners' resolution, but he said he would have something to say about it after conferring with Chairman Sumners today.

Representatives Sumners expressed the belief that "there is a good chance to get a favorable report," as the apparent majority pledged to support the resolution grew to 14 with indications that 5 absent Republicans would join them.

New promises of support came from Representatives Springer (Republican), of Indiana, and Graham (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

"District residents should have had the right of suffrage long ago," remarked Springer.

toward the Long Island, N. Y., estate of Joseph E. Davies, where they will reside, the royal family grew less European and more American.

The transformation began during the early hours of yesterday morning when the Trenton dropped anchor in Annapolis Roads, Chesapeake Bay.

There were no spare moments after breakfast. The children—Crown Prince Jeane, 19; Princess Elizabeth, 17; Princess Adelaide, 16; Princess Gabrielle, 15; Prince Charles, 12, and Pincess Alix, 10—dressed for the day's ceremonies and ran excitedly around the deck inspecting the new shoreline.

Prince Consort Felix and the Crown Prince had been in America in August, 1939, and had visited the White House, but to the smaller children it was all new.

At 10 o'clock the Anita Clay, launch of the Naval Academy superintendent, came alongside the Trenton with the reception committee.

The committee included Superintendent Admiral Wilson Brown, former Ambassador to Belgium and Minister to Luxembourg Davies, now a special assistant to the State Department; Luxembourg Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Hugues le Gallais; Stanley Woodward, acting chief of protocal of the State Department, and Lieut. C. J. Zandorak, aide to Admiral Brown.

The Trenton was on calm Bay waters, under a hazy blue sky. A homeward-bound pennant, lengthened 1 foot for each of the 8 days at sea, trailed from the mainmast. Hovering nearby was Admiral Brown's private seaplane and riding within a short distance were three private motor boats, carrying people out to see the distinguished visitors.

Band Plays "Luxembourg"

Admiral Brown brought aboard a box of fresh fruit and vegetables and a brilliant bouquet of summer flowers.

After 45 minutes of conversation on the main deck and in Capt. J. R. Barry's cabin, the party entered the waiting launch.

At the dock, the Naval Academy band, under direction of Lieut. William R. Suma, played "Luxembourg," the national anthem of the little country that is now under German domination.

Prince Consort Felix stood at rigid attention. An honor guard of marines presented arms. The children stood stiffly, but their eyes wandered over the dock, as they tried to get used to this strange, new land.

The prince spoke a few words of greeting:

"I am very thankful to the United States Government for the invitation to come to the United States. It was a grand crossing, a fine trip on your splendid ship."

that we shall be vindicated. Our cause is just. The victory shall be ours."

Bonds of Charles Sindelar, artist who was declared to have represented that Jesus Christ posed for a picture he painted and of which reproductions were sold to "I Am" devotees, and his wife, Pearl, also were reduced from $10,000 to $5,000 each.

They were expected to surrender tomorrow. Federal officials said others of the 24 defendants were preparing to surrender here, in Chicago and Philadelphia. Their arraignment has been set for next Wednesday.

In an interview, Mrs. Marjorie Ballard said the elder Ballards had lived in a 12 to 14 room suite in a Los Angeles hotel at a cost of around $1,000 a month.

"Mrs. Ballard usually had a bodyguard and she usually carried a little black satchel with her, never letting it out of her sight," she declared. "It was supposed to be filled with jewels.

"She always appeared at meetings wearing gorgeous evening gowns and corsages. She used to order two corsages of orchids each day, usually paying $50 or $60 for each, during the time I lived there.

"She used to wear a 12-karat diamond ring, several other large diamonds, an 18-karat diamond breastpin, diamond bracelets and a diamond wrist watch, most of which had been 'love gifts' to her.

"Guy Ballard used to wear a white tuxedo and a 10-karat diamond stickpin, which was also a love gife; a 6-karat diamond ring, and one time he even wanted to put rhinestone buttons on the tuxedo, but I talked him out of it.

Trunks Filled With Jewels

"Mrs. Ballard has specially made trunks, large size, filled with small trays. In these trays she keeps her costume jewelry. I couldn't begin to tell you how much of it she has. She also has specially constructed trunks for her evening gowns. I have never known a woman with so many clothes. I don't believe I am exaggerating when I say she has enough coats, hats, artificial flowers, gloves, costume jewelry and other accessories to start a good-sized store."

The young woman was an active worker in the movement before she married Donald Ballard.

"They teach that all powers are good powers, released to overcome hate powers," she said. "They teach the belief that light forces destroy dark forces and they teach patriotism to the high heavens, although they had various 'decrees of annihilation,' including one for President Roosevelt and another for Westbrook Pegler."

The Federal indictment charged that the defendants broke up homes among many members and encouraged divorce by teaching the practice of "absolute sex continence."

Strange Rituals Cease in Capital

Strange rituals described by neighbors as religious singing often interspersed with popular tunes and punctuated frequently by the words "I am," suddenly ceased yesterday at the Washington reading room of the "I Am" cult, 1711 M street northwest.

Four Washingtonians are among the 24 leaders under indictment in Los Angeles on charges of fraudulent use of the mails.

The movement, which is said to have thousands of converts, teaches reincarnation, sex abstinence and intense patriotism. Adherents to the group wear two flags.

Whatever the meaning of "I Am" is, however, a local spokesman of the group, who called at The Post yesterday, failed to make clear.

"Love Gifts" Expected

The spokesman helped to confuse the issue by stating the group was not an organization, but an "activity." He said there were no members, but "students," as himself. No money is solicited, he added, but students are expected to offer contributions called "love gifts," and finally, the meeting house is not a headquarters, but a "reading room."

The spokesman refused to discuss the indictment, or to name local leaders of the activity. At the reading room a colored maid would only say that the people who live in the three-story building were out of town.

From neighbors, however, it was learned that meetings have been held three times daily, sometimes by as many as 100 "well dressed" people, mostly women, and of all ages. Some arrived in expensive automobiles.

"Hate" Publicity

Members were described as artistic-looking. Singing of hymns, they said, was followed by loud clapping and shouts of "I am!"

The spokesman explained that the "I Ams" have "nothing to hide," but "hate" newspaper publicity.

He added that in previous articles religious characters had been maligned.

Meanwhile, police here said no warrants had been received as yet to arrest any local members of the organization.

Ready-to-Eat Cereals Boon to Cook These Days

Crispy Corn Flakes With Fresh Fruit And Milk Excellent on Summer Diet; Many Cool Dishes Easy to Prepare

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor

THERE IS little to be done about the weather, but there is many a pleasant way in which the cook can sally into the realm of uncooked foods or foods that are easy to prepare. Dried or ready-to-eat cereals are really wonderful adjuncts to the menu and a boon to the cook in hot weather.

The ready-to-eat cereals that contain all of the grain are very valuable foods because they are rich in minerals and vitamins. Crispy corn flakes too when eaten with fresh fruit and milk make an excellent addition to the hot weather diet. Cereals are very easily digested and are excellent sources of energy. The protein in cereals is not so complete as the protein in milk, so it is desirable to supplement cereals with milk. Whole milk is preferable for children and invalids to eat with cereals. Cream is richer in calories, but it is not so adequate a food and is more difficult to digest. The use of sugar on cereals should be discouraged. Sugar blunts the appetite for the milder flavors of cereals, and if taken in too large an amount is irritating to the digestive tract.

Well-Chosen Meal

Several days ago when I was eating breakfast at a restaurant near the Washington Airport, the pilot and co-pilot of a plane that had just landed came in for breakfast. I was interested to learn the foods that pilots eat. These two drank large glasses of orange juice and followed with toasted cornflakes, topped with sliced fresh peaches and cream. It was a well-chosen meal, chuck full of both vitamins and minerals. The pilots drank milk with the meal.

But dry cereals also may be used in many other ways, for they blend into many foods, such as puddings, cookies, cakes and hot breads.

One of my recipe treasures is a Date Refrigerator Pudding. I treasure it for two reasons: First, I don't have to light the oven, or even scald the milk on top of the stove, which is a consideration in this summer heat; second, it is a dessert that is as delicious as if hours were spent in its preparation. It takes only a few minutes to prepare. Make it right after breakfast, then put it into the refrigerator to use for dinner. The recipe follows:

Date Refrigerator Pudding

Crush 3 cups bran flakes and 1 cup toasted cornflakes. Reserve ½ cup. To remaining flakes add a dash of salt, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon grated orange rind, 1 cup finely cut dates and 1 cup broken nut meats. Next add 1 cup milk and mix well. Shape into a roll about 8 inches long. Sprinkle the roll with the reserved ¼ cup flakes. Wrap in waxed paper and chill 5 to 8 hours, or until firm. Serve in slices, topped with whipped cream. Serves eight.

Light, fluffy muffins made with bran flakes as an ingredient are enjoyed even by people who ordinarily think they don't like bran muffins. The bran imparts a flavor that everyone likes. The following recipe makes 12 to 15 medium-sized muffins.

Bran Flake Muffins

Pour ¾ cup milk over ¾ cup bran flakes and let stand for ten minutes. Add 1-3 cup molasses, 1 well-beaten egg and 3 tablespoons melted fat to the bran mixture. Mix and sift together 1½ cups sifted flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon and ½ teaspoon nutmeg. Add dry mixture to bran mixture, using a stirring motion only long enough to mix ingredients. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, for 20 minutes or until brown.

Beets Add Crowning Touch To Dinner Service

It's beet time. Little and young, with a fine careless rapture of flavor, its bright red color adds a crowning touch to the dinner plate. It is time to serve beets and often now. Serve the tops, too. Beet greens give you iron as well as calcium and the vitamins A, B and C.

In preparing beets remember that the pigments which give the color are soluble in water. To help beets hold their color, cook them in their skins and with 2 inches of the stem in water to cover. If diced or shredded, boil in a covered kettle in just enough water to prevent them from burning.

Harvard Beets

Harvard beets are a favorite with many people. To make them, slice or dice 3 cups freshly cooked boiled beets. Stir in a double boiler until smooth ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, ½ teaspoon salt and ½ cup mild cider vinegar, or dry white wine may be used. Cook and stir those ingredients until they are clear. Add beets and place them over hot water for 30 minutes. Just before serving heat the beets, but do not boil them, and 2 tablespoons butter.

Air Pilots Choose Nutritious Food

Capt. Joe Kuhn and Pilot Robert Lavake, of the Eastern Air Lines, pictured above, are fortifying themselves for another ride, with a nutritious breakfast of toasted corn flakes, topped with sliced peaches and cream. Milk was also the choice of these airmen who realize they must have steady nerves to guide their ship on its course

District P.-T. A. Program Parallels That of U. S. Body

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

A FEW DAYS AGO, there came from the Chicago headquarters of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers an announcement of the three-year program on "The Child and His Community" being launched by the Congress through its 28,000 local parent-teacher associations. It is based on the 1940 White House Conference, according to the announcement by Mrs. William Kletzer, of Portland, Oreg., new national president.

Activities basic to the well-being of American children and youth, urged in the program, include only one item to which the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, to which Mrs. C. D. Lowe is president, has not given special attention. That is a study of conditions producing migrant families and support of measures to prevent such conditions. The local organization had a discussion of this subject last season by a qualified speaker, but has not studied it because it does not relate directly to the District except as migrants may come into the local population.

Other activities urged by the national congress, which are already on the broad program of the strong Washington organization, include: extension of parent education; encouragement of higher standards of family life; emphasis on spiritual values in child development; promotion of economic security for all families; support of housing programs; support of Federal and State aid for local schools; provision of adequate recreational and library facilities; improvement of high school education, especially vocational training; promotion of child labor laws; fostering of health education, public health and social services; development of tolerance of all races and creeds, and translation of research into action in health, education and social adjustment.

In the last three years the program topics were "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness." Under the last of the three headings, which was last year's parent-teacher subject, a young mother, who is a member of the District Congress, made a suggestion to which special attention may be turned this season in study and discussion groups. It is that of the serious effect on children of discord between adults in the home.

Adults who allow their tempers to get out of control and who indulge in arguments before children of the household do it without regard to the lasting harm it often does to them, this mother pointed out. The subject is considered such an important one for parents to consider that it will be brought up for special consideration by members of the local congress in the fall.

EASY TO REMEMBER—If you want to know the name of the president of the District of Columbia Home Economics Association and of the president of the Home Economics Women in Business, you need only remember Miss Burns. But there is a catch. Actually they are two different people, both with the same surname.

Helen Burns, dietitian at Walter Reed Hospital, is president of the Home Economics Association, and Bernice Burns, director of kitchen planning at the Electric Institute heads the Home Economic Women in Business, a group within the association.

RAPID GROWTH—There is no doubt but that women like to play cards, golf, go to the movies or just sit at home with a good book—hardly one of them that doesn't—but no matter how much they enjoy recreation, they are never happier than when they are doing something to help others. I believe this accounts for the way they are making garments, surgical dressings and knitting for the Red Cross through the hottest weather of the summer and liking it.

Just as an exaple on March 27 Myrtle-May Sith, who has been interested in Red Cross work since she was a child out in Chicago, organized a group at the Hay-Adams House called the American Knitters' Club. There were four enrolled at the first meeting. An expert knitter herself, she volunteered to teach any who came and did not know how. The club has been meeting weekly on Wednesday mornings at the Hay-Adams, open to anyone interested and now has 40 regular members.

The women are at liberty to do any kind of knitting they desire—make dresses for themselves or baby boots for their grandchildren, but 90 per cent of them are working for the Red Cross. About 70 per cent complete a man's or woman's sweater a week, and this week Miss Smith has made two.

She is receiving requests to organize other groups, one at the King-Smith School in the fall.

Plans are also under way for a group within the club to knit for needy children in the District, who will be selected with the cooperation of local agencies, measured and provided with little knitted suits, dresser and sweaters for the fall and winter. Mrs. Caroline Garlock is in charge of this group.

Hrs. Garlock has knitted seven sweaters for the Red Cross and is now knitting socks for the British Royal Air Force. Among others in the group are Mrs. Pearl Quencer, Mrs. Joseph P. Romeo, Mrs. H. B. Jackson, Mrs. A. H. Knox, Mrs. Bertha McKee and Mrs. John Alexis, who has been working for the Friends of France, all of whom learned their knitting in the club; Mrs. Helen Heimel, Mrs. Julia Webb, Mrs. Mary Henry, who does a sweater a week as a usual thing and made two last week; Miss Bertha Day Shaw, Mrs. Peter J. Belhumeur, Mrs. Preston A. Davis, Mrs. H. E. Fellows, Mrs. H. R. Prittipoe, Mrs. Bernice M. Fickinger, Mrs. R. V. Root. Miss Lottie L. Turner, who turns out a sweater weekly; Mrs. Eleanor Dahlberg, who not only knits, but also sews garments for refugees; Mrs. W. R. Heuer and daughter, Mary; Mrs. Coralese Leibiger, Mrs. R. H. Rutledge, Mrs. E. Fischer.

Also included is Miss Louise Miller, who works at home in co-operation with Miss Smith and, since last August, has made 28 pairs of hose, 10 beanees (caps), 3 scarps and more than 50 sweaters.

The Club Page, edited by Miss Arndt, will be resumed in September.

Luxembourg Royalty White House Guests

Prince Consort Felix and 6 Children Honored by President at First Formal Executive Mansion Luncheon in Months

By Dudley Harmon

Three royal princes and four princesses arrived in Washington yesterday—the largest group of royalty ever to come here at one time—and were guests at the first formal luncheon at the White House for several months.

Honored by President Roosevelt was the Prince Consort of Luxembourg. He was accompanied to the Executive Mansion by all of his six children, the Crown Prince Jeane, Prince Charles, Princess Adelaide, Princess Gabrielle, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Alix.

Others in the company were the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, the Charge d'Affaires of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Joseph E. Davies, Assistant Secretary of State; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, naval aid to the President, and Stanley Woodward, of the Protocol Division of the State Department.

The Prince Consort and his family were scheduled to leave Washington yesterday for Long Island, where Mr. Davies has put his estate at their disposal. The Prince Consort and Mr. Davies first became friends when the latter was Ambassador to Belgium. Our envoy to that country is also accredited to Luxembourg.

Consort and Son Here Last Year

It was little less than a year ago that the Prince Consort and his oldest son, the Crown Prince, arrived in Washington for a visit, on their first trip to this country. Getting here late in August, they found the town almost deserted of notables except for a silk-hatted group from the State Department, which met them at the station.

On that trip the Prince and his son stayed overnight at the White House. Mr. Woodward, who met them in Annapolis yesterday and was at the President's luncheon, was the Prince Consort's official escort during that visit to the United States. He left with him for a trip across the country, but the outbreak of war cut it short and the royal pair returned immediately to Luxembourg.

Princess Charlotte, wife of the Prince Consort, is remaining in Lisbon for the time being, and her husband said yesterday that he did not know when she would come over. He plans to have their children continue their studies in the United States.

Two of the Children Bring Their Pet

The Charge d'Affaires of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais were among the distinguished people on the dock in Annapolis yesterday to greet the royal party when it stepped off the cruiser Trenton. Gov. O'Conor of Maryland and Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent of the Naval Academy, were also on hand.

Two of the children, Princess Alice, who is 10, and Prince Charles, two years older, brought their pet dog ashore with them, and the youngest princess carried a toy airplane.

The Prince Consort is perhaps the first of a series of royal refugees who will visit Washington in the next few months. With Europe in its present state, our Capital may become a temporary refuge for kings and queens, writers and artists, professors and statesmen who fled after the Nazi invasion.

Plan Marriage

The marriage of Miss Rebekah Fouts to John F. Wharton, of Philadelphia, will take place August 4. Miss Fouts is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Earl Fouts of Camden, Ind., formerly of Washington, where Mr. Fouts was supervising receiver of national insolvent banks.

W. F. Viers Honeymoon in New England

Couple Will Make Home in D. C. After Lake District Tour

Mr. and Mrs. William Frederick Vier, jr., who were married July 17, in the Lincoln Chapel of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will make their home at 1230 New Hampshire avenue after a honeymoon on a New Hampshire lake.

The bride, the former Miss Katharine Noel Reardon, is the daughter of Mrs. M. F. Reardon, of 1910 Kalorama road, and Mr. Vier is the son of W. F. Vier, of Dover, N. H.

The Rev. Albert Evans officiated at their wedding. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Robert Reardon, wore a gown of silk jersey and tulle and carried a white prayer book with an orchid and single sweet peas tied with white ribbon.

Mrs. Minnie Maisie, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing acqua chiffon and carrying yellow roses. Dwayne Vier was best man for his brother and Thomas H. Key, the bride's brother-in-law, ushered.

The bride is a descendant of Col. Charles Partee, of Revolutionary fame, and Gen Barringer of the Civil War, and Mr. Vier is a nephew of Gen. Frank Hines.

Ethel Nelson Is Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar H. Nelson, of 4025 New Hampshire avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ethel M. Nelson, to John L. Palmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Palmer, jr., of Arlington, Va.

The wedding will take place September 7 at the Petworth Methodist Church, with the Rev. Frank Steelman, pastor, officiating at a 4 o'clock ceremony.

Miss Nelson was graduated from George Washington University in 1937 and received her master's degree from West Virginia University in 1939. She is a member of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority and several honorary organizations, including Mortar Board. At present she is with the State Department.

Mr. Palmer, who attended George Washington University, is now with the Labor Board of the Norfolk Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Va.

The couple will make their home at 1603 Nineteenth street, Washington.

'Storkgram' Tells Of Zemans Birth

Fahnestock Troth Told

Of wide interest in New York and Washington is the announcement by Mme. Vladimir V. Orlik Boulmistrow, of New York and Oyster Bay, Long Island, of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Caroline Fontaine Fahnestock, to Warwick Brooke Stabler.

Miss Fahnestock is well known in Washington, where she has important family connections. She is the daughter of Snowden A. Fahnestock, of this city and Newport, and the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, of this city, and the late Mr. and Mrs. F. Reading Bertron, of New York and Oyster Bay.

After attending a convent school abroad, Miss Fahnestock was presented to society here at a dance given several seasons ago. She has made frequent visits here since.

Mr. Stabler is the son of the late Jordan Herbert Stabler and Mrs. Stabler, of New York. The late Mr. Stabler was for many years a member of the diplomatic service and more recently was connected with an oil company in South America and Europe. His son prepared at the Fay School and Brook and was graduated from Harvard in June. He is a member of the Hasty Pudding, the Varsity and Tennis and Racquet clubs of Boston.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of Mrs. James P. McCabe, of Spring Gap, Md., of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Willow McCabe, to George L. Wellington, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Wellington, of Bel Air, Md.

Mr. Wellington was graduated from Allegany High School and Tome School, Port Deposit. He is a grandson of the late Dr. Wilim W. Wiley, prominent physician and surgeon in Cumberland, Md. The prospective bridegroom is attached to the Sixth Field Artillery, Fort Hoyle.

The bride was graduated from Pittsburgh High School and attended Maryland College. Her father, who died several years ago, was a well known contractor.

Patricia Hill Gives Party For Her Guest

One-Man Band Provides Entertainment at Fete Honoring Miss Manton

A one-man hill billy band entertained guests yesterday afternoon at the garden party given by Miss Patricia Hill for her house guest, Miss Barbara Manton, of Ohio.

Although the party started at 5:30 o'clock and was supposed to end at 7 o'clock, guests lingered on until late in the evening. The Hill home on Ellicott street boasts two and one-half acres of fragrant flowers. Yesterday an impromptu bar was arranged in the garden and gay out-of-door furniture was set up for conversational groups on the lawn.

The hostess wore a white organdy frock, street length, with pink roses. She had pinned a cluster of roses to her dark curls. Miss Manton, in a sea foam green dimity, received with her hostess. Mrs. Uline Hill, mother of Miss Hill, also received. She was gowned in a lettuce green, dotted swiss frock. Guests at the party included Miss Manton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Manton, of Ohio, and Mrs. Hill's father, M. J. Uuline.

Among the young set enjoying the affair were Miss Betty Ann Swaggart, Charles Camalier, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynne, Miss Marilynn Himes, Louis Woods, Miss Peggy Townsend, Meade Patrick, Jack Segar, Miss Dorothy Shelton, Lowell Bradford, William Shelton, Miss Nancy Weller, Miss Nancy Strong, Fred Mechlin, Miss Mary Selden Kennedy, Allan Moulton, Marie Theresa Norris, Hal Crowell, Marion Norris, Barry Woods, Nick Gill, Bill Sperry, Jim Clark, Lieut. Pat Merchant, Henry Pike and Miss Ruth Hamilton.

Mrs. Wagstaff's Wedding Set

David Wagstaff, jr., of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., who is now stationed at Fort Myer.

The couple will be married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Kemper at Fort Riley, Kans., where Capt. Luebbermann is stationed. Mrs. Wagstaff, who has been staying with her father, George B. Wagstaff, of Long Island, since her return from Reno, left yesterday by plane for Fort Riley.

The prospective bride is the daughter of the Hon. Mrs. Lionel Forbes-Sempill, of London, England. Capt. Luebbermann was formerly attached to Fort Myer.

Aurel de Alth, of the Hungarian Legation here, was a recent sojourner at Hot Springs. Among those who attended a luncheon given there recently by Mr. and Mrs. John J. Hicks Kerr were Mr. and Mrs. John Newbold, William F. White and Mme. de Hertelendy.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

AT ANY SEASIDE resort one can find amusement on damp evenings at the boardwalk auctioneers shops. Most people enjoy the excitement of the bidding and occasionally some very nice things can be picked up.

For instance, there is one auctioneer at Rehoboth who advertises the sale of objets d'art from the estate of the late Clarence Mackay. One of his clients, during her recent vacation at Rehoboth, was Mrs. Ernest Van Fossan who has a nice eye for antiques and a great deal of taste. Also coming out the private sanctorum of this particular auctioneer and looking very pleased with life, I spied Washington's own Dr. Hans Kindler.

Besides those who are connaisseurs and know what and when to buy, there is a great majority of people who feel that anything bought at auction must of necessity be a bargain.

IT MUST HAVE BEEN to them that the auctioneer was appealing the other evening when he said impressively, "This, ladies and gentlemen, is a very beautiful picture of the Biblical character, Ruth. It is painted in oil, on porcelain, and I myself guarantee that it is a genuine semi-antique."

Latest arrivals in Rehoboth are Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Phillips, formerly of Washington, who now make their home in Haverford, Pa. Mrs. Phillips, the former Natalie Keaney, will spend this week-end in Washington with her aunt, Mrs. Sydney Cloman. In August Mrs. Cloman is planning to go to Watch Hill for a visit with Mrs. Henry Gibbins, wife of Maj. Gen. Gibbins.

Also week-ending in Washington will be Mr. and Mrs. Norman Keith who will visit Mrs. Keith's mother, Mrs. Ralph Worthington. It will be the first real visit which the former Mrs. Marian Worthington Luke has had in Washington since her recent marriage.

Commander Archibald Stirling is staying at the Corner Cupboard in Rehoboth.

A RECENT VISITOR to Rehoboth was Mrs. Walter Nash, of Washington, who is a real devotee of the beach. She said that Mr. Nash preferred to spend every available moment at Bluemont, Va., where he is constructing a house with his own hands. It seems that the first thing that the well-known organist and musician did upon acquiring the property site at Bluemont was to build a fence around what Mrs. Nash describes as "a patch of woods."

He completed the fence with an impressive gate and a huge, homemade lock and felt, with pride, that his future home would be safe from trespassers when and if he finished building it. Mrs. Nash said the climax came when her husband discovered that he couldn't undo the lock which he had made, and was obliged to climb over the fence, thus becoming the first trespasser on his own domain.

Mrs. Harold Walker, the other day, came all the way to Rehoboth from her home, Webley, on the Eastern Shore just for a swim in the ocean. She plans to make the trek to the sea three times a week and call it a summer at the beach. Mrs. Walker said that she has sold or given away all of the animals at Webley and that she misses them very much but finds the responsibility of the farm much less.

Mariano Zuberbuhler and pretty Senora de Zuberbuhler—she is the former Margot Garrett, of Washington—have arrived in Havana where he is attached to the Argentine delegation at the Pan American conference. Mariano, who was for several years a secretary at the Argentine Embassy in Washington, had resigned from his country's foreign service several months ago and returned to live in Argentina. He was asked to take the present appointment at the Havana conference because of his experience at the Pan American conference at Panama last September.

First entertainment for the United States delegation to the conference was the buffet supper given by the United States Ambassador to Cuba and Mrs. Messersmith at the embassy. Besides being a very agreeable function the party introduced the members of the delegation to their co-workers at the conference.

Hugh Greggs On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gregg, who were married here on Wednesday, are on their wedding trip. They will make their home in Cambridge, Mass.

The marriage of the former Miss Catherine Warner, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Carden F. Warner, and Mr. Gregg took place at the home of the bride's parents in Chevy Chase, Md., at 9 a. m., with the Rev. Hillman Hollister officiating. A buffet breakfast was given after the ceremony, which was performed on the terrace.

Preceding the ceremony a string orchestra, with Sidney and his violin, played. White and green was used to decorate the improvised altar.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white marquisette gown with a fitted bodice of Irish lace. Her finger-tip length veil was held with a cap of old lace and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. E. E. Hamilton was matron of honor for her sister. She wore a pale green tulle frock over silk with a shirred bodice and full skirt and carried yellow roses. David Gregg, of Nashua, was his brother's best man.

Only members of the two families were present at the wedding and breakfast. The bridegroom's father, Harry A. Gregg, of Nashua, N. H., came down for the ceremony.

The bride was graduated from the Connecticut College for Women and previously attended Mount Vernon Seminary. Mr. Gregg was graduated from Yale University and is now attending Harvard Law School.

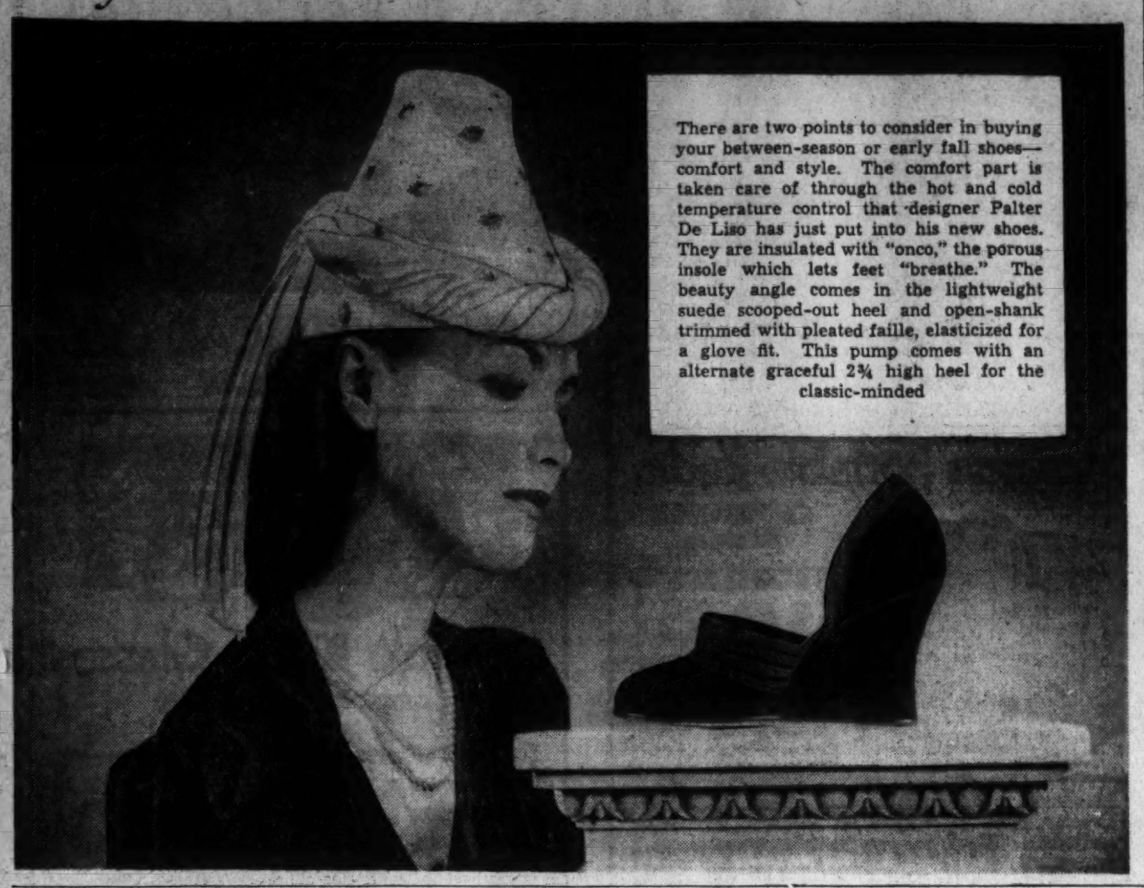
Early Fall Shoes Insulated to Let Feet 'Breathe'



There are two points to consider in buying your between-season or early fall shoes—comfort and style. The comfort part is taken care of through the hot and cold temperature control that designer Palter De Liso has just put into his new shoes. They are insulated with "onco," the porous insole which lets feet "breathe." The beauty angle comes in the lightweight suede scooped-out heel and open-shank trimmed with pleated faille, elasticized for a glove fit. This pump comes with an alternate graceful 2¾ high heel for the classic-minded

Concealing Play Skirt Is Needed for Most Figures

By Ida Jean Kain

IF THE truth were known, probably these ordinances about shorts have no connection with morals—maybe the city fathers turn thumbs down in the interests of beautification!

It's not the shorts that are so bad—it's the thighs! The skinny girls bow in and the fat girls bow out, and practically all of them appear to better advantage with a neat and concealing skirt over the play suit. Thus the law!

The thin girls seem to regard thigh hollows as beyond their control and the stout girls expect that a diet—when they get around to one—will take care of everything. But not only does it take exercise to perfect the thighs, it takes exercise with a special technique.

Easily Corrected

If you are willing to exercise according to instructions and will spend a few minutes a day doing it you can make a marvelous improvement in this portion of the figure. Here are some exercises which begin easily but work fast.

Lie on the side on the floor with the legs straight down and one on top of the other. Raise the top leg from the hip, up and back. Don't make it too easy for yourself! The leg must be raised backward as well as up. That's more difficult to do, but it is the way to get the inner and outer thigh muscles. Repeat the exercise 10 times, gradually increasing to 50, with each leg. Rest between each ten counts.

Remain in the same position on the floor and do this exercise: Raise the top leg from the hip to make wide circles, again moving the leg slightly backward. Repeat ten times with the top leg, rest, and change sides. Gradually increase the stint to 50 counts for each leg.

Simple Exercises

The next two exercises are performed standing, with a chair for support.

Stand facing the chair, hands on the back and seat turned away from you. Leave enough room to swing the legs freely in the space between yourself and the chair. Swing the left leg out to the side, then across the body and over to the right side. Keep swinging for 25 counts. Rest a bit, then swing the other leg, same number of counts.

Now turn around with your back to the chair, still holding on for support, and bring the right leg up and out in wide circles, moving the leg from the hip. Touch the toes to the floor at the extreme right of the body, cross it over the left and touch the toes to the floor at the extreme left. This is the chorus girls' technique—and it's perfect for the legs.

Summer is the time we stop looking for entertainment and want to play. But if you are to look lovely in your play clothes you'd better work just a little at exercise!

Harriet Elliott Recalls 25-Year-Old Prediction of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw

A QUARTER of a century ago a young teacher from the Women's College of the University of North Carolina went to the Greensboro station to meet Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, who was to address a suffrage meeting at the college. She had with her a telegram which had arrived for Dr. Shaw. The message proved to be an invitation from President Wilson to join the National Defense Council, organized some weeks before. Dr. Shaw's only comment after reading it was to this effect: "When the next war comes women will be sufficiently appreciated so that they will be asked to serve their country at the same time the men are."

Harriett Elliott

Last month the teacher who delivered that telegram, Harriett Elliott, received a similar message from President Roosevelt. The difference was that places on the National Defense Commission were offered simultaneously to six men.

Should harbor police find a lady's girdle floating in the Potomac, they needn't bother looking for a corpse to fit it. The girdle was dropped overboard from a yacht anchored near Hains Point while the occupant was doing her laundry. She felt sorry to see it go but was darned if she would ruin her permanent by diving for it.

WITH THE GARDENERS—A Mrs. Jones returned from one of the early spring garden tours with a long face. Why was it, she lamented to her husband, that these estates could exhibit such beautiful blooms when her flower beds hadn't shown a sign of life? Mr. Jones was sympathetic, and the two carried their problem to a leading florist.

Nothing to it, the clerk told them. "The society folks just come in here a couple days before the tour and buy up a lot of potted plants. Next time you visit one of those estates in the spring finger the ground around the plants; you can feel the circular cake of soil that came out of the pot."

Martha Ellyn's landlady, who knows she writes about cooking for The Post, is not easily upset by the unexpected arrival of food, sometimes in large quantities. But there was a plaintive note in her voice the other day when she told Martha that six barrels of limes had been delivered and were cluttering up her basement.

Even Martha Ellyn was surprised by the quantity—until she discovered the barrels contained 480 pounds of chloride of lime, addressed to someone else altogether. Considerable research led them to the rightful owner, a man who apparently wanted quite a lot of fertilizer.

TIPS ON MARKETING

(From the U. S. Department of Weights and Measures)

of Weights and Measures

When you buy gasoline always ask for a definite number of gallons. Never buy "50 cents' worth" or "a dollar's worth." Filling station attendants, if dishonest, might deliver short measure and you would have a hard time proving it.

Always see that the measuring indicator on the pump is set for zero. When the delivery is finished look at the indicator again to be sure you have received the amount you ordered. If your filling station attendant finds you are a close observer of such matters he is not likely to try to cheat you.

Guest Room Must Be Made to Suit All Types and Ages

As most homes have but one guest room, it should be "neuter" in gender and adaptable to the varying tastes of young and old, dainty and robust. Chairs, for instance, should not be so fragile that the male guest is wary of sitting on them, nor should the atmosphere be so masculine that Aunt Emma will have the impression of awakening in a fraternity house.

The keynote of the guest room should be comfort. Whenever possible twin beds should be provided. Good mattresses and springs will help the visitor to overcome any insomnia brought on by unaccustomed surroundings. Approthe average felt snap brim hat, side lamp and table, a chest of drawers for odds and ends and some books and magazines for in-between moments, should be included.

Girl Can't Dope Out Man's Attitude Toward Her; With a Little Encouragement, She Would Fall In Love With Him; But Fears Getting Hurt

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in my late twenties, have a pleasing personality, a number of fine friends and am fairly attractive. In the past I have made many mistakes (while enjoying my share of popularity), but, fortunately, things have always turned out all right. I can safely say that I have profited by these mistakes and count myself a richer person for the experiences. I am sensitive to beauty and detest vulgarity in any form.

Last Christmas, while week-ending at a vacation resort, I met a young man my age from another city. He is nice looking and has a fine character. We seemed to "click" and had a lovely time together. On parting, we exchanged home addresses and he asked me to call him if I were ever in his city. A week later, I dropped him a note, which he answered a week later. This started a friendly correspondence.

He is well educated and heads his own business. He works terrifically hard and has to get away often for brief periods of relaxation. In January I visited his city on the pretext of business—as our firm has headquarters there. I sent him a note in advance, saying when I would be there. Thirty minutes after I had checked in at my hotel, he telephoned. We went out that evening with an engaged couple who are friends of his; and we had a marvelous time. This was on Saturday. I was staying over Sunday, but he did not go out of his way to see me next day, although he called—and during our conversation I mentioned that I had other engagements, which was true. He asked me to write and promised to come down.

Our correspondence continued, and after some weeks he wrote that he was going back to the winter resort for a restful weekend. I told him I would come up with a girl friend, and he made arrangements for us to share a table with him and his older brother—a man of entirely different and less attractive personality (whom I had met before) and toward whom he shows a great sense of devotion and responsibility. Unfortunately, I couldn't get away—which I explained by letter. I didn't hear from him for two months, and at first I felt dreadful. Then I forgot all about him.

Early in May I received from him the longest letter he has ever written. It was full of apologies. He had planned to come here with his brother, but the bottom had dropped out of Wall street, etc., and he had much to say about the effect of war on business. He asked me to forgive him; when I was coming up; and to write. My family was planning to drive to his city in a month, so I wrote to designate the week-end we would be there. He answered immediately, making a date for Saturday night and saying that while he would be spending Sunday afternoon with his family, he would be free that evening.

We went out that Saturday evening with the same couple (married by now), and again we had a marvelous time. This time he kissed me, and I cannot describe the perfection of the experience. He seemed to feel as I did about it . . . He telephoned Sunday afternoon (having failed to reach me earlier, because I was at breakfast) to say he couldn't get away to see me.

Yet he asked me to write, and mentioned his intention of coming down some mid-week to see Congress in session. He said he and his brother were going away for a week, some time during July (it was then June 23.) Four days after getting home, I wrote to him. There was no answer for almost three weeks. Then, on July 19, he wrote from the hotel where he and his brother are vacationing. He didn't have my home address (where he has always written), so he addressed it in care of the firm that employs me, saying he hoped I would receive it.

Now, I don't know whether to pretend I didn't receive it and see if he will write again—or what. I mailed him an announcement of my graduation from evening college, and it is possible he may acknowledge that, thinking I haven't received his letter. What do you think? I am on the verge of falling in love with him—if given a little encouragement. But I have never been really in love, and I don't want to hurt myself for nothing.

From the facts—and I have told you everything—how does the situation look to you? Am I building false dreams? I think of him constantly, living over again in memory the perfect times we have had together. Perhaps he regards me only as a friend, and I don't want to run after him or do anything unladylike. Yet, I believe he is the type that needs awakening. I will appreciate your frank advice—immediately given.

ANXIOUS.

Man's Short Memory Is Highly Significant

DEAR ANXIOUS: The incident in which the man (after six months' acquaintanceship and correspondence), was obliged to dispatch a letter to you in care of your firm—for the reason that he didn't have a memorandum of your home address at hand—shows how casual and fragmentary is his thought of, or interest in, you.

That such business-like resourcefulness should be necessary, when finally he possessed the time and inclination to write, tells plainly that you are not an intimate of either his conscious or unconscious thought. On the contrary, it suggests that you are (in his scheme of things) simply a girl from Washington he met at Christmas, whom he hears from occasionally and sees sometimes, when she comes to town.

". . . A girl who lives (as his thought might run) . . . well, now where does she live? . . . anyway, she works for the firm of Blank & Blank. A pretty good sort. Pleasant on a party. Maybe a useful contact . . . Seems to like me a lot. . . . I expect, with a little encouragement, etc., etc. . . ."

That, my dear girl, is approximately how the situation (from his angle) looks to me, all things considered. So if your "dreams" of him stem from the theoretical premise that he is day dreaming likewise of you, I think that premise and those dreams are "false" indeed.

Your notion of pretending you failed to receive his latest letter is downright foolish. It makes no point. What it amounts to, no doubt, is wounded vanity, trying to think of a way to strike back, or save its face. If you care to continue the haphazard exchange, you might strike a light note, by inditing him a letter on business stationery, to the effect that his of the nineteenth inst. had been received and contents noted, etc., etc.

I'm sure he wouldn't mind and he might even enjoy it. Constructively viewed, his artless blunder (shall we say?) gives you the cue for revising the whole tone of your letter-writing approach to him. Until now, I imagine, it has been insinuatingly intimate—and has profited you little. So why not be aloofly merry for a change? The time is a long way from being ripe for you to fall in love with him. And, frankly, the wisest thing you could do would be to let the correspondence die—unless, of course, he vigorously exerts himself to revive it again. But don't let it die on a note of pique or rudeness from your side. Be a friend to the end; not a baffled huntress.

Thoughts on the Weather

In all this excessive humidity
How very difficult to avoid stupidity!

As the mercury toward 98 degrees is warming,
What a tremendous effort it is to be charming!

In view of everything, I wonder
If it wouldn't be better
To give up all my exercises until
It's a little cooler and wetter?

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch)

The recent stress of political convention and war work has sent many Truthtown notables to rest homes, sanitariums and de luxe mountain camps.

Mrs. Thornberry Flitt, after a rest at Violette Verbena's Beauty Retreat, will go to Camp Plush in the Catskills for a vigorous season of sports. "At a time like this," said Mrs. Flitt, "it is every woman's first duty to keep fit."

Mrs. Mike McPace is resting at her country estate near here. Mrs. McPace was accompanied to the Democratic Convention at Chicago by her private masseur, Zinchberg. Said Mrs. McPace: "If it had not been for Zinchberg, I could never have gone through with it."

Mrs. Reginald Pelf and Mrs. Mark Steppe, who attended both conventions and who also have been giving two days a week to war work, have left on a cruise for South America. Both were in a state of near collapse.

Mrs. Ainsworth Swaggerton will relax for the next two months at Clamport, Mosquito Bay and other resorts.

On the Polo Front

Truthtown socialites who are still in town did their bit for charity yesterday when they drove out to Silvercrest Field to witness the benefit polo match. Prominent among the spectators, in a large hat laden with grapes, carrots and cornflowers, was Mrs. Badgerton Bellwether, Truthtown's senior dowager, whose son Buzzie was among the players.

Mrs. Ronald Portleigh, in a becoming shade of lobster red, watched her hard-riding son, Stu, whose name is now coupled with that of Mrs. Dowry Luker, while Mrs. Cantwright-Burlap-Fellowes-Van Husk cheered her former husband Cecil on to victory with the Ruby Mead team.

The Countess deZipper, in a stunning bilious green ensemble, was telling friends she found the summer in Truthtown too fascinating to leave, and Mrs. Boxwood Maze and Philander Plunkette were seen sipping soda pop through straws.

Very fashionably turned out in a peacock blue suit with yellow gloves was J. Hollingsworth Dripp, bachelor, gourmet and man about town, while Valentine Merryfeather, who was divorced last week at Reno by the former Mimi Sappington, was the cynosure of all eyes in his rust colored trousers and white jacket.

Six Hurt as Cruiser Burns in Yacht Baisin

Flames Injure Two Children After Explosion

Six persons, including two children, were burned last night when a 50-foot cabin cruiser exploded and caught fire in the yacht basin near Washington Airport. Five others were also forced to flee the blazing ship.

Those burned were Lawrence A. Lee, roofing contractor, of 6515 Eighth street northwest; his son, Donald, 9, and Madelyn Jacobs, 6, also of the Eighth street address, and three Arlington County firemen, Charles Duncan, Joseph Eller and William Johnson.

Lee and Madelyn Jacobs suffered first and second degree burns of the arms and legs while Donald suffered first-degree leg burns. They were treated at Emergency Hospital. The three firemen were slightly burned on the arms.

Lee said he was working on the boat's gasoline engines when an explosion rocked the ship and set ablaze the cabin where the two children were resting.

Samuel Jacobs, of the Eighth street address, rushed into the cabin and carried the children ashore, accompanied by Mrs. Jacobs, Mrs. Nan Lee, wife of the owner of the boat; Arthur Olson, of 6517 Eighth street northwest, and Miss Marian Jackson, of 6700 Sixth street northwest.

Meanwhile, Lee had jumped overboard fearing his bathing suit would catch fire, but he climbed back to fight the flames with the aid of George Belt and his son, David, who live on a nearby boat.

Lee and the Belts fled to shore when the flames got out of control. Arlington County firemen fought the blaze for an hour but the ship was completely destroyed.

N. Y. Suicide Wanted In D. C. Robbery

A nine-story suicide leap from a Niagara Falls (N. Y.) hotel yesterday may have "closed" a 1937 robbery for Washington police.

Niagara Falls police superintendent, Thomas J. Holohan, according to the Associated Press, identified the man as Jackson Brown, 21, of Chicago, who left a "confession" to a $17,800 coast-to-coast series of crime.

Holohan said he doubted the authority of the "confession," but that the dead man's fingerprints check with FBI records of a man wanted in the Capital. Washington police records show a Jackson Broun is sought in the robbery of Paul Grousnickle, 500 block Eighth street southwest, February 9, 1937.

Firemen Sue Transit Company for $150,000

Fire Department Capt. Harry O. Bailey, jr., 952 Maple avenue northwest, and Fireman Edward T. Hammill, 219 Eighth street southwest, sued the Capital Transit Co. in the District Court yesterday for damages of $75,000 each.

The firemen's complaints said they suffered severe injuries when their truck collided with a bus at Fifth and E streets northwest as they were answering an alarm last January 20. The complaints said the bus driver negligently failed to slow down, stop or yield the right of way. Attorney Joseph P. Bailey represented the two firemen.

Mayo Assault Trial Postponed in N. Y.

The trial in New York City of John Cecil W. Mayo, 26-year-old, a newspaper artist, of Washington D. C., on charges of illegal possession of a revolver and first degree assault arising from the shooting of Miss Lila Belle Andrews, World's Fair hostess, on June 6, was put over to the September term yesterday by Judge Franklin Taylor in Brooklyn County Court. The adjournment was granted on the request of Myles McDonald, assistant district attorney, who said he needed time to bring witnesses from Washington. Miss Andrews, who has recovered, was in court.

Ankle Scars Result In Suspect's Arrest

Faced with a Solomon judgment, Washington police proved equal to the task yesterday.

Detective Sergt. Thomas Nally was sent to a downtown bus terminal to pick up a man wanted by Wilson, N. C., police as a fugitive from a chain gang. The fleeing convict, the police were informed, was easily identifiable—he was colored, of such-and-such a build, with two fingers missing from his left hand.

The detective met the bus and discovered two colored men, of such-and-such a build, with the third and little fingers of the left hand missing. Each denied he was the fugitive.

At First Precinct Station detectives uncovered deep scars on the ankles of one suspect—indelible marks of chain-gang steel shackles. He was arrested and held for the North Carolina authorities.

District K. of C. To Elect Tonight

Officers ill be elected tonight by the District of Columbia Chapter, Knights of Columbus, at its final meeting of the chapter year. Alfred A. McGarraghy, State deputy for the District, is expected to attend, along with his two deputies, Francis J. Malloy and Thomas J. Myers.

Charles J. Considine, chairman of the chapter, will preside over the meeting in the clubhouse, 918 Tenth street northwest, at 8:30 p. m. The grand knight of each of the local five councils and their two delegates also will attend.

No Witch Burning, Labor Envoy Warns

John S. Gambs, United States Commissioner of Labor at Geneva, Switzerland, told the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday that among the antidotes for the totalitarian influence was more democracy in this country rather than less. He also warned that "witch burning" should be avoided.

Injured When Car Hit Tree In Rain, Mt. Rainier Man Dies

Arthur W. Appell, 55, of 3514 Thirty-eighth street, Mount Rainier, Md., died in Casualty Hospital last night as the result of injuries received when he lost control of his auto and hit a tree in the 1800 block of Monroe street northwest during Tuesday's storm. He suffered a ruptured liver and fractured ribs.

Mr. Appell's death brought the death toll for the year to 39 compared with 46 at this time last year.

Mrs. Hazel Ullman, 46, of Richmond, Va., suffered a broken collarbone yesterday when her automobile collided with another at Eleventh street and Maryland avenue northeast. She was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Police placed a charge of reckless driving against her, contending she ran through a red light before striking a car driven by John T. Osborne, 24, of 135 Eleventh street southeast.

John Beit, 4, of 810 Otis place northwest, was bruised when he was knocked down by an automobile while riding his bicycle in the 700 block Newton street northwest. He received first-aid at Garfield Hospital.

Night Too Hot for Drama, But Crowd Enjoys 'Kismet'

OUTDOOR DRAMA—Alice Louise Hunter, in the role of "Marsenah," and Fred Peters, as the Caliph, in the role of "Kismet," presented last night in the Sylvan Theater

1,500 Attend Open Air Play at Sylvan Theater; Cast of 50 Eckington-Roosevelt Players Wins Applause; Music, Costumes Please

There was a flash of brilliant costumes and the sound of oriental music at the Sylvan Theater last night as 1,500 persons watched boy meet girl in the romantic drama "Kismet," presented by a cast of more than 50 of the Eckington-Roosevelt players.

Seated on chairs before the open-air stage and on the slopes of the Monument Grounds, the crowd found it too hot to take seriously the tribulations of a triangle in Turkestan several centuries ago. Lines such as "How must honor like thine judge a frail thing like mine," brought snickers.

And when the hero said to the heroine, "How can I leave my soul behind?" someone murmured, "Be a heel."

Mainly the audience was quite, attentive; frequently seemed carried away by the well-acted drama that seldom let down in its speed. Music and costumes drew the admiration of the observers even if they were not greatly enthralled by the trumped-up mysteries of the no longer mysterious East.

Bouquet of the evening went not to a heat-tired but polite audience; rather it went to the cast of players and technicians under the direction of Pauline Eaton Oak. The Chevy Chase Dairy Band gave a concert preceding the play.

Five in Capital Area Pass Va. Bar Test

They are John Woolfolk Burke, jr., Donald S. Dugan, David LeBreton, jr., and Kenneth R. Routon, of Washington, and Arthur H. Hanson, of Bethesda.

Police Differ On Repute Of Lake's

Night Club Called Both Good and Bad at Hearing Of ABC Board

Members of the Metropolitan Police Force divided sharply yesterday in their testimony regarding the reputation of Jimmie Lake's Ninth street establishment as the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board continued hearings on Lake's as well as four other Ninth street license holders on charges of violating the liquor code.

In one of the most hectic sessions ever held before the board, 11 members of the force, including Capt. Rhoda Milliken, Women's Bureau, and a special agent from the FBI, alternate witnesses swore the reputation of Lake's night club was either "good" or "bad."

The case will be continued tomorrow at 9 a. m.

Called to testify by William W. Dent, assistant corporation counsel, six of the police force gave Lake's place a clean bill of health, although several of the men said they had seen prostitutes in the night club. The club is located at 513 Ninth street northwest.

Several clashes occurred between Dent and James A. O'Shea, attorney for Lake, over evidence regarding the alleged reputation of the night club. Alll testimony tending to throw a bad light on the establishment was protested by O'Shea.

"Heard About Reputation"

Capt. Milliken said she heard Jimmie Lake's club had a bad reputation and when questioned by O'Shea to whom she had talked, excluding other police authorities, she refused to answer and was upheld by Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, acting chairman of the ABC board. Capt. Milliken attempted to introduce some records of an employe of the club, but was not permitted to do so, since in all cases the employe, although arrested on charges was acquitted.

The G-man, M. A. Taylor, brought statements which two other agents had taken regarding the night club, but was not allowed to introduce them because of the objections of O'Shea. The two agents, who investigated Lake's night club, Charles Lanman and Igor E. Nitschke, are both away from the city, one permanently. Lanman is on a special assignment, Taylor said, and may return soon, but not in time for tomorrow's hearing.

Taylor said he had visited the club several times. At the outset of his testimony he said "I would not say I know the reputation' of the club, but after Dent explained he could tell about what he had heard from anyone about Lake's, Taylor said the reputation was "not so good." He admitted he was influenced by the statements prepared by the other agents.

Eugene R. Watson, an undercover agent for the police, said the club "was not a very nice place." He said he had observed in the downstair's cafe "liquor sold to intoxicated persons, bookies taking bets and prostitutes soliciting."

Made 30 or 40 Reports

He said he had visited the upstairs night club six or seven times but had observed no violations.

Watson reported he had made "some 30 or 40 reports" to his superior officer about his findings, but Officer John L. Sprague said between October 18, 1939, and July 22 there had been no arrests made in the establishment for any reason. Watson served as a probationer last year, and has just recently been made a regular member of the force.

Sprague said he had always found the place operated "very good," had never seen any violations, and the James J. Lake proprietor always gave him "complete cooperation" in maintaining an orderly business. He said he had heard prostitutes visited the club, "but they also visit some of better night clubs."

One of the charges against Lake is that he permitted his club to be used for immoral purposes. Chief complainant against Lake, as well as the other licensees was 17-year-old Daisy Mae Clarke, a self-confessed prostitute, who on July 3, testified she solicited in the club in February of this year. The Clarke girl is now in a Virginia sanatorium.

Policeman John A. Burgess, of the First Precinct, said he had been in the club on several occasions, had seen prostitutes there but no soliciting.

"I've seen them in other places along Ninth street," he said, adding, "Ninth street is lousy with them."

Prior to the Lake case, witnesses appearing for the four other establishments testified they had never seen Daisy Mae Clarke, who is alleged to have been served alcoholic beverages in each place. This brought charges against them of selling to a minor.

The 'Romance of Journalism'

Edgewood Playground Gets Out Own Paper; Local News Plentiful With 5 'Columnists' on Job

First Issue 'Sold Out' Free of Charge; Staff Finds Work 'Exciting'

The reportorial staff of the Edgewood News, official organ of Edgewood Playground, Third and Evarts street northeast, relaxed around the snowball truck yesterday, the newspaper's first issue completely sold out.

Actually, the 150 copies of the News' original edition went free of charge to the staff's softball and shuffleboard competitors at the playground.

But the new publication, a bimonthly four-page paper, was considered as little less than revolutionary by the playground journalists. It is the first to be published by any Washington recreation area, it was reported.

Although the News has a slightly top-heavy staff with two reporters, and five "columnists" its policy dictates considerable emphasis on local news.

Sprinkler Man Gets Puff

Under the by-line of Buddy Flynn, 14, the lead news story on page 1 reports, "A shower is provided for the gang every day except Saturday from 1:15 until 1:45 in the afternoon. The name of the man that brings the sprinkler around is Jud Katz and he is a nice guy except that he starts to leave just when we are beginning to have fun."

Columnist Mildred Glick, 17, turns out a feature slugged Edgewood Nite Life. Yesterday her column stated "to the Edgewood jitterbugs, midsummer means swinging out to the tune of the 'Little Brown Jug,'" and continued: "Louis Barcarola might be nominated as an outstanding hep-cat, while Betty Gibson, Lorraine Rosch, Madeleine Hughes, and Theresa Jameson run a close race for honors among the feminine swingeroos."

Material Plentiful

Talking shop, Miss Glick said that she had no trouble at all collecting enough material for a column twice the length of the one appearing yesterday.

She indicated that she had held her story down to skeleton proportions because of space requirements.

Elizabeth Ippolito, 15, who writes a sports column, radiated enthusiasm over her first venture into journalism.

"I can see where it might be hard work" she observed, "but it's so exciting she said . . . just like the movies."

1. Checking the first edition of the Edgewood News are (from left) Thelma Dowling, 13, society columnist; Bill Wiekham, 18, cartoonist; Arnold Fine, playground instructor and adviser; George Hughes, 14, reporter, and Elizabeth Ippolito, 15, sports reporter. The paper is . . .

Bandit Gives Up, Admits 13 Holdups

Escaped Inmate Of St. Elizabeths Captured After A Wild Chase

An escaped inmate of St. Elizabeths Hospital, who turned bandit, was captured last night in a wild chase of police, firemen and citizens at whom he fired four revolver shots in a pursuit through a dry cleaning establishment and an apartment building on upper Wisconsin avenue.

At police headquarters shortly afterward, the bandit confessed to 13 holdups, giving detectives a complete list of places robbed and victims in the order in which the crimes were committed.

"Send me back to St. Elizabeths," he pleaded with officers. "I don't want to be put to work on the rock pile."

Detectives said the man, 37 years old, escaped from the insane hospital last October.

The chase began in the Friendship Liquor Store, 4228 Wisconsin avenue where the bandit took $200 in a paper bag after cowering Morris Gottlieb, 51, of 816 Shepherd street northwest, the manager; Clarence Higginbotham, 26, of 522 Oklahoma avenue northeast, colored helper, and a customer.

Higginbotham, with a gun, and Gottlieb started in pursuit as the bandit left the store. Firemen joined the chase as the gunman passed the firehouse at Wisconsin avenue and Warren street.

Four squad cars of police joined the chase as the bandit dashed up Warren street into the vacant lots running along the rear of stores in the 4200 block of Wisconsin avenue. Privates William C. Grooms and D. F. Meecham, of the Eighth Precinct, chased the man on foot through the bushes for 20 minutes before he ducked into the rear door of a dry cleaning establishment.

Private George C. Bowie, of No. 12 Truck Company, tried to block the man as he came out of the cleaner's, but stood back when he leveled the revolver at the fireman and commanded:

"Keep away or I'll let you have it."

The gunman then dashed into the Devonshire Court Apartments, 4115 Wisconsin avenue, where he menaced four tenants and an employe, Andrew Brown, 33, of 733 Fifty-eighth street northeast, before he was captured at Thirty-ninth and Warren streets by Privates D. O. Fletcher and B. T. Chapman, of the Seventh Precinct.

He surrendered to the officers peaceably, handing over gun and money bag.

LUCKY SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY. They say seven is a fortunate number. We believe it because August 1 will be the seventh anniversary of Russell A. Conn as manager of the Ambassador Hotel, an association that has spelled the best of good fortune to everyone concerned. There's no need to dilate on the success of the Ambassador and its Hi Hat. Everyone knows that the Ambassador represents the last word in modern hospitality and that the hail-fellow atmosphere of the Hi Hat keeps it packed the year around. For which, credit to Mr. Conn's expert management and the friendly touch that keeps both the visiting public and the hotel staff happy and contented. Take a bow, Mr. Conn—take seven bows!

RUSSELL A. CONN, manager of the Ambassador Hotel

DIAMOND HORSESHOE VISITORS. Next week's show on the Shoreham Terrace will include the Hazel Manager Girls from Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe, one of the most successful spots in New York.

MAYFAIR INTO NUTHOUSE. "Mousie" Garner's Trio is giving Mayfair the atmosphere of a psychopathic ward de luxe. We don't know who let "Mousie" out but he and the Mayfair customers are having a wonderful time going demented. "Mousie" starts off easily in the afternoon with light screwballing, but by midnight he's ready for the padded cell and straitjacket. Describing him is like trying to describe a Texas twister. He's a phenomenon that must be experienced to be understood.

RAIN, GO 'WAY! That big rain nearly set the New Bavarian afloat. Water poured in from the alley, through the kitchen and all over the place. Patrons had more fun wading around and walking across planks and Owner Conrad Siebold ran around muttering, "River, go 'way from my door!" But everything's been dehydrated and is dry again.

ELOQUENCE PLUS. Dear Miss Harris: What has happened to your valiant vocabular vehemence with its vitally verbose valedictory of the virtues of the Neptune Room's Herthquake Trio? Cordially, Frank Romer.

Heavenly days! Mr. Romer, didn't you know that I'm learning French and Spanish just to get new and praiseworthy phrases to describe the Herthquake Trio. I've used up all the English superlatives in trying to tell how good they are.

STARLIGHT VS. RAINBOW. Arthur Herbert, maestro of the Starlight Roof, writes that he wants to match his golf team against the Rainbow Room golfers. But he's wary of the Rainbowers' suggestion that they choose the course. "I think the match should be played on a neutral course," says Arthur. How did we ever get mixed up in this, anyway?

"JITTERBUG JAMBOREE" is the lead-off number in the "Hollywood Starlet Revue" at the Casino Royal. It's distinctly high voltage, the starlets all being pretty as posies and clever dancers in the bargain. They also have an exceptionally lovely "Fan Fantasy." There are a flock of other acts, all eye-taking. Huey Liang sings sonorously, but won't be coaxed into encores. Pianist Sparty Donato, newest addition to Jack Schaeffer's orchestra, plays his own tricky composition, "Tinkerin' the Ivories."

TIMES PAST. Jim Fitzpatrick, sax player with Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band, was such a star as an amateur baseball player that he was offered a job with the Boston Red Sox . . . Songstress Harriet Derck, of the Lounge Riviera, used to write a radio column for the New York Mirror . . . Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, used to be a night club owner himself. He was the proprietor of the Volga Boatman on Thomas Circle.

COUNTRYSIDE DIVERSION, PREFERRED. Maryland Gardens. Here's where you can dine beside a huge aquamarine pool with a rainbow fountain. Dance music by Nadine's Co-Eds, an all-girl band, "lovely to look at, delightful to hear." Madcap Yvonne Logan is the mistress of ceremonies.

Del Rio. Linger in the cocktail lounge or dance in the blue and gold Fiesta Room to the music of Ray Bradford's band with singer Bonnie Fleming. The planked steak dinners are terrific.

River Bend. Handsome rustic spot right on the Mount Vernon Boulevard. Huge dance floor and even huger rhythms by George Stein's orchestra. Old-fashioned chicken dinners are the house specialty.

O'Donnell's Farms. The big and breezy veranda is an ideal spot for dining, always 10 to 15 degrees cooler than in town. Dancing on Saturday nights to a Sidney unit. Accordioning and vocals on other nights by big Les Colvin.

Nightingale. One of the largest and most popular dance spots for miles around. Rodd Raffell, leader of the 14-piece band, has a special gift for making sleek, 1940-ish arrangements, much acclaimed by experts in modern music.

MAYFLOWER OASIS. If you can light at a table next the fountain in the Mayflower Lounge you will be in the middle of a perfect stage setting. The fountain is lush with greenery and sparkling water, the Dick Koons music has a sparkle, too. It's so ideal that you'll stay and stay, leave reluctantly.

BUDDY SHANER, of the Lotus, has a new song that is bringing down the house both because it's ideal for his voice and it's America's top song today. Yes, it's "God Bless America."

TAVERN, 1940. The Harrington Tavern has the cosy quiet, the fine drinks of a tavern of George Washington's day, but its air cooling and modern equipment are strictly 1940. And that makes everything perfect.

"BOOGIE WOOGIE EXPRESS." We thought the column was finished and went to the Neptune Room. There we were handed the first Neptune "Boogie Woogie," new summer drink named in honor of Milt Herth, champion boogie woogie organist.

Willard Smith Named Health Security Aide

The Health Security Administration, clearing house for hospital care of the medically indigent in Washington and surrounding counties, yesterday announced appointment of Willard C. Smith as associate administrator.

W. C. SMITH

Smith, who leaves a bureau headship in the Social Security Board to fill the new HSA post, will be installed at a meeting of the administration's trustees tonight.

A native of Illinois, Smith has been a resident of Washington since 1920, when he joined the United States Public Health Service. During the World War he served overseas in the Army Medical Corps, and on being mustered out in September, 1919, joined the American Red Cross to do relief work in the Russian Baltic provinces.

In recognition of his Red Cross activities, Smith was decorated with the Order of St. Stanislaus by the Kerensky government.

He transferred from the Public Health Service to the Census Bureau in 1929, remaining there until joining the Social Security Board staff in 1937.

Smith is a former president of the Council of Social Agencies and the Monday Evening Club. He organized the Social Hygiene Society's local chapter in 1920 and at present is a director of that organization, also vice president of the District Tuberculosis Association and a director of the Council of Social Agencies.

In becoming associate administrator of the Health Security Administration, Smith yields his vice presidency of that agency to Dr. Watson W. Eldridge. Another officer change which will be made at tonight's meeting is the installation of Dr. William DeKleine as second vice president.

William R. Castle, jr., Undersecretary of State in the Hoover Administration, is scheduled to be elected to the board of trustees.

U. S. and Labor Cooperation Aiding Defense, Says Hillman

State Employment Service Executives, In National Conference Here, Are Told They Will Face Real Test in Six Months

With all factions in organized labor cooperating and all agencies of Government working harmoniously every shortage of skilled workers encountered to date in the national defense program has been speedily solved, Sidney Hillman declared yesterday.

Addressing a national conference of State employment service executives called by the Social Security Board's employment security bureau, the labor coordinator of the Defense Advisory Commission stressed the vital importance of their role in locating and placing expert craftsmen.

So far there have been no labor supply "bottlenecks," Hillman said, but the real test will come in about six months when production of defense implements should be at its peak.

Hillman's extemporaneous talk featured the opening session of the employment directors' three-day meeting in the North Interior Building auditorium. More than 100 executive and employment service directors, representing the various States, Alaska and the Districts, are registered for the conference, whose principal task is to expedite the finding and placement of skilled and semiskilled labor.

While making no direct reference to the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. split, Hillman, who is a vice president of the latter, said the labor movement is now "unified and cooperative in matters affecting national defense."

He praised the employment office officials for "doing your job well" and pointed out that the responses by State and Federal agencies alike, whose aid has been requested by the defense commission, has been encouraging.

Ewan Clague, director of the Bureau of Employment Security, said the defense program "offers us an opportunity to perform a service to the Nation greater and of more vital importance than any of us could have imagined a few months ago."

"We cannot continue to take shelter in our customary prerogatives," he said. "As circumstances change, we must improvise methods and relationships to make the employment service work under these new conditions."

Other speakers were Wayne Coy, assistant FSA administrator; George E. Bigge and Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, members of the Social Security Board, and Oscar M. Powell, executive director. Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the SSB, presided over the inaugural session.

Grand slams are seldom bid in duplicate because of the risk involved, but when one is successfully bid and made the declarers are practically assured of "top on the board." Said Frank, after the hand was over, "When my partner bid six diamonds, I didn't know if I should go to seven or not. If my partner had the king of hearts, I was sunk, but if he king was in clubs I would be all right. I decided that, since partner had bid three clubs, he probably had five clubs to the king, so I bid the grand slam.

"The diamond opening was fortunate, but the spades broke and it was lay-down."

Kin Await Word Of Lloyd Moore After War Service

Former Senator Harry B. Hawes, of Missouri, who is now practicing law in Washington, hopefully awaited word yesterday on the whereabouts and safety of his son-in-law, Lloyd Moore, a volunteer ambulance driver missing in France.

Moore, whose wife is the former Eppes Hawes, has been on the "unaccounted for" list for more than a month. Four weeks ago Mrs. Moore, now in California, asked the State Department to help locate him, without success.

Earlier this month New York headquarters of the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps announced that the French government had awarded Moore the Croix de Guerre. He served with the Pershing unit.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, July 25.—Not since Detroit went daft over Mickey Cochrane in 1934 in the pure delight that stemmed from the town's first pennant in 25 years has any athlete created here the furore that is whipping about the not unhandsome head of big Buck Newsom.

POVICH

Newsom, with his pitching for the Tigers, has set Detroit on its collective noodle. The local gazettes assign one reporter to cover the ball game and another to report the wonderful nonsense of Newsom. Bo Bo is thriving on it. He showboats all over the premises, and this week he signed for personal appearances at Detroit's biggest theater. His only prop will be a microphone, and his subject will be, of course, The Great Newsom.

Bo Bo's broken thumb was bigger news in Detroit last week than the biggest political graft scandal that the town has known. Newsom has never bothered to confess that it is the same thumb that was broken three years ago when he was with the Browns and when he was comparatively unimportant. He didn't lose a pitching turn on that occasion, but now that he is a big shot with the Tigers, who are leading the league, Bo Bo is making an extravagant production out of his accident.

"I'm obeying the doctors only so long," says Newsom. "They say I can't pitch for two weeks, but it's my thumb, not theirs. I'll be in there Sunday. Old Bo Bo isn't going to let this team down."

All of a sudden, Newsom has let it be known that he is a fierce team player. He laps up his new role of martyrdom. "Nothing that Bo Bo can give 'em is too good for this team," says Newsom. "I'll pitch my heart out for the grandest bunch of fellows I've ever played with."

But sometimes his admiration for Newsom catches up with and overtakes his admiration for his teammates as, when he added: "Old Bo Bo with a broken thumb is still a better pitcher than a lot of guys in this league."

He was discussing the collapse of the Yankees today and breezily reiterated a prediction he had never made, saying: "I knew they were due to fold. That's what I said last spring. And old Bo Bo hasn't been doing them Yanks any good this season. All the times I beat 'em didn't help 'em." (The records show that all the times Newsom has beaten the Yankees this season is two.)

Bo Bo is the answer to a feature writer's prayer. He has never been accused of being a mental giant, but he is publicity wise and lends himself to stories about Newsom. A week ago, he dispatched a telegram to Promoter Mike Jacobs offering to fight Joe Louis any time anywhere. Then he casually hinted the matter to his press and created a swarm of photographers asking him to strike a fistic pose.

For his week's theater appearance here, he'll draw down a cool $2,000, and a return engagement no doubt. He'll expound on Buck Newsom, the pennant races and his broken thumb. He'll be a sure-fire hit. He may not be lucid, but he's glib in front of the mike. And he's a natural mimic. His take-offs of Amos and Andy, Bob Burns, Bing Crosby and President Roosevelt are worthy of an artist.

Bo Bo isn't above stealing a gag, but he's smart enough to steal only the good gags. When Dizzy Dean got in dutch with his old Cardinal teammates for calling them "a bunch of semi-pros," Newsom blithely charged Dizzy with stealing his stuff. When the All-Star game was staged in Washington in 1937, Dean announced that the game could go hang, he wouldn't play in it. When Newsom was finally named to the All-Star squad this month, he pulled the same line, knowing full well that he would report and play.

His 20 victories with the Tigers last year brought him his biggest baseball salary—$20,000, but he didn't sign with alacrity. In fact, after Owner Briggs of the Tigers agreed to terms at the first asking, Newsom asked him to defer the ceremonies until he could stage at least a phoney hold-out siege. "I always hold out, Mr. Briggs," he said.

On the eve of the last All-Star game in St. Louis, Newsom was invited by Gabby Street, his old manager with the Browns, and now a radio commentator, to go on the air in pre-game broadcast. About as allergic to microphones as he is to crowds, Newsom readily agreed. As Newsom was being interviewed by Street, he was slipped a note by a studio executive asking him to say something nice about Street.

Newsom turned away from the microphone and asked, quietly, "Is this a local broadcast or are we on the network?"

"Not on the network, just local," was the answer.

Thus satisfied, Bo Bo returned to the microphone and interjected: "There's one thing I want to say before I leave this program. I've worked for ten big league managers, and your own Gabby Street is the smartest manager I ever played under."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 25.—Bucky Walters, in more ways than one the most remarkable ball player of them all, was in bed. It was 5 o'clock in the afternoon, but he was setting no new record for early retiring. He was just resting up for a little job he had later in the evening, that of pitching against the Dodgers.

CONSIDINE

He reached over and lighted a cigarette (he's a chain smoker) and said, "we're better this year than last. Better punch. Better reserves. More pitching. Playing tighter baseball. By gosh, it's worth your job to miss a couple of games. Once you get on that Cincinnati bench this year, it's awful hard to get off—the way those subs fill in. Lookit the way Joost and Myron McCormick went, when they got in there."

We said something about a common rumor this spring that the Yankees' 4-0 victory over the Reds in the last World Series had broken the Reds' spirit.

"Somebody forgot to tell us, I guess," Walters chuckled. "I don't think that series bothered a fellow on our team. Funny thing, a lot of us thought we came close to winning it. Yeah, I know we didn't win a game. But you know we never should have lost that first one—Duke's (Derringer) game against Ruffing—and we never should have lost that fourth game. We just went to pieces in that one. And we figure if we had won those two that we were entitled to, well, we'd've taken the series. They didn't have anybody to come back with."

Walters thinks that the trouble with the Cards, who were pre-season favorites to win the National League pennant, was the loss of Jimmy Brown.

"He doesn't even look the same, after that ball busted his nose in", the pitcher says. Walters doesn't believe the sale of Medwick hurt the Cards. "He just isn't the hitter he was a couple of years ago." As for Johnny Vander Meer, Walters is as mystified over his decline as everyone else on the Reds.

"The only thing I could see wrong with him," he said, "was that when Johnny would rare back and throw a hard one, and it missed, he'd begin to think. He'd figure, 'I've got to pitch this next one to a spot.' I think he'd do better just throwing another hard one through there."

Bucky climbed into his suit. We walked downstairs—headed for his breakfast and my dinner.

Nat Errors Give Tigers 5-2 Margin

Welaj Picked Off 2d to Destroy Hope Of Tying; Detroit Is Outhit by 9-8

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, July 25.—The Nats burrowed toward seventh place this afternoon with an unbrilliant performance against the Tigers which cost Dutch Leonard his eleventh defeat of the season. The score was 5 to 2, and the Tigers had the help of four Washington misplays.

An error that didn't find its way into the box score was the most brutal blow to the Nats. It was perpetrated by Johnny Welaj, who broke up a seventh inning rally that threatened to tie the score by getting himself picked off second base after starting the uprising with a pinch hit.

Rookie Harold Newhouser was the winner over Dutch Leonard in a pitching duel, despite the fact he was batted out of the box in the seventh. Leonard, making his first start since his wrist was bruised by a line drive, gave up eight hits to the Tigers, but all of the four runs he allowed were tainted by errors and his one wild pitch.

Slight Consolation

Washington outhit the Tigers, 9 to 8, if that is any consolation.

The Nats started muffing their scoring chances as early as the first inning. George Case opened the game with a single to left, stole second and languished there as Lewis struck out, Walker grounded out and Travis struck out.

Washington's success began and ended with the second inning when they made motions as if to blast Newhouser off the mound and did manage to score two runs. After West fanned, Jimmy Bloodworth belted a triple to the centerfield wall and in rapid succession Jimmy Pofahl doubled to the fence in center and Rick Ferrell doubled to the fence in left.

But for the next four innings they were pretty feeble against Newhouser, getting only two hits. The Tigers meanwhile began to peck away at Leonard and wiped out the Nats' 2-0 lead.

Hank Triples

They came up with a run in the second inning when Greenberg led off with a triple to right-center wall and continued home when Bloodworth bobbled the relay from Buddy Lewis. In the third they tied the score at 2-2 with the help of a wild pitch by Leonard. Tebbetts opened the inning with a single, was sacrificed to second, went to third when a knuckle pitch went into the dirt, and scored on McCosky's long fly to Case.

One run per inning was the Tigers' formula from the second to the fifth, inclusive, and each time it was a tainted run. In the fourth, Rudy York's Texas Leaguer fell in short center for a double and when Walker failed to pick up the ball on two tries, York continued to third. He scored on Higgins' fly to Case. In the fifth, Case Bobbled Fox's single to center to put the Tiger on second, whence he scored on McCosky's double to right to give the Tigers a 4-2 lead.

No Hit Necessary

Detroit's last run was achieved against Alex Carrasquel in the eighth without the aid of a hit. Carrasquel walked McCosky, who went to second on an infield out, stole third when the Venezuelan dallied with his wind-up, and scored on Greenberg's fly to Case.

The seventh was the Nats' most painful inning. They drove Newhouser out of the box and seemingly were on their way to a cluster of runs when Welaj jammed the works. Leading off the inning as a pinch hitter for Leonard, he singled to left and George Case contributed a single that moved Welaj to second.

Case's blast brought left-handed Archie McKain to the box and he got the Tigers out of trouble with the help of Welaj, who was picked off second base with Lewis at bat. Lewis later drew a walk, but Walker and Travis were easy outs.

Sam Chapman Hits Two-Run Homer; Harder Knocked Out In Fifth Inning

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 25. — Connie Mack's Athletics snapped the Cleveland winning streak at five games today so the Indians dropped to a game and a half behind the league-leading Detroit Tigers. Lee (Buck) Ross defied the 95-degree temperature and went the distance for a 7-to-6 triumph, his fifth of the year.

Sam Chapman's first-inning homer with a mate on finally proved the deciding blow. Philadelphia knocked Pitcher Mel Harder out in the fifth inning and took a 7-to-1 lead. The Indians rallied and Johnny Allen hurled scoreless ball from then on, but the Athletics had just enough runs to salvage one victory from the three-game series.

Hal Trosky got credit for driving in half of Cleveland's runs today, but failure of the lower part of the batting order, excepting Ken Keltner, meant the difference between victory and defeat.

Kovacs Victor Over Parker at Sea Bright

Gilbert Hunt Also Advances In Net Tourney

Riggs, Cooke, Others In Semifinals of Singles Play

By the Associated Press

Sea Bright, N. J., July 25.—Punishing power and a will to win carried Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., to a brilliant three-set victory today over Frankie Parker, Pasadena, Calif., and a place in the semifinals of the Sea Bright Invitation Tennis Tournament.

Defending the title he snared a year ago, Parker played near flawless tennis but still absorbed a 3—6, 6—3, 6—4 beating as the 20-year-old coast sensation was perfection itself.

Into the semifinal round with Kovacs marched Bobby Riggs, Chicago, national champion; Elwood T. Cooke, Portland, Oreg., and Gilbert A. Hunt, jr., Washington, winners in prolonged tests.

From time to time during the sunniy afternoon it looked as if Riggs might meet Parker's fate. He battled three sets to eliminate Henry Prusoff, of Seattle.

Hunt in Hot Battle

But Henry failed to capitalize on his best opportunities and bowed out 6—8, 6—4, 6—4.

Hunt had a hot battle in disposing of Sidney B. Wood, jr., veteran New Yorker, 8—6, 1—6, 6—2, while Cooke took much less time to turn back Gardnar Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla., 8—6, 6—4.

Wood was brilliant overhead and hit with severity off the ground in the first two sets.

The nearly packed gallery saw a gorgeous exhibition of sharply contrasted games as unseeded Kovacs hammered his way to victory over the country's No. 2 ranking player.

Kovacs Recovers in Second

Unable to find his touch, and erring frequently off his backhand in the opening set, Kovacs recovered nicely in the second. Once he started going there was no stopping him. He ran Frankie from corner to corner with deep drives, carefully working his way to net for kills which repeatedly found Parker out of court.

Tomorrow Riggs meets Hunt and Cooke faces Kovacs.

Survivors in the women's singles play were idle, but in the doubles the teams of Alice Marble and Sarah Palfrey, and Dorothy May Bundy and Mary Arnold won their way to the finals.

St. Paul Open To Start Today Over Cool Course

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, Minn., July 25.—Promised relief from hot weather, professional golfing greats tomorrow will begin carving up the cash and glory at the annual St. Paul Open.

Temperatures in the seventies are due to replace recent readings past the century mark as the links men tee off.

Site of the event is the Keller Course and just being content with being even with par in the 72-hole medal test probably won't get a player a very big slice of the $7,500 put up for prizes.

Dick Metz, of Chicago, the defending champion, proved that to his own satisfaction when he slipped around the 72 holes in 270 strokes last year, a figure which stands as a competitive record for a par 72 course. A 288 total, even par, last year paid off only $70.

Until Metz and a few of the other boys came along, Harry Cooper, of Chicago, was making the St. Paul Open his own special event. Cooper won the tournament three times and is back again for another try to fatten a total of $8,408 which he already has earned in the event.

Yanks Take Wild 13-8 Victory Over Browns

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 25.—The World Champion New York Yankees salvaged a victory out of their three-game series with the Browns by slugging their way to a 13-to-8 decision today.

It was another nightmarish exhibition with the two teams getting 28 hits to match their total of yesterday. They made 26 in their first meeing Tuesday night.

Joe Gordon hit two home runs for the Yankees, bringing his total for the season, to 16, and Joe DiMaggio smacked out two doubles and a single to extend his hitting streak to 18 consecutive games. This equaled the year's longest string achieved previously by Taft Wright of the Chicago White Sox.

Red Ruffing gave up a dozen hits, but lasted the route for his ninth victory of the year.

The Yanks scored twice in the first inning, then fell behind as the Browns tallied three times. But after New York scored five more in the third St. Louis never again was able to catch up, although Harold Clift and John Berardino hit homers.

Bees Execute Triple Play; Lose to Cubs

3-Way Killing Comes Too Late as Chicago Scores 6 Runs Before

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 25.—The first triple play of the National League season failed to help the Boston Bees' cause today as they dropped the series finale to the Chicago Cubs, 8-4.

The visitors had six runs posted before the Bees made the triple killing in the eighth inning. In that frame, Dom Dallessandro lashed out a pinch-hit single with the bases loaded to drive in Hank Leiber and Zeke Bonura and sent Manager Gabby Hartnett to second.

Starter Bill Lee then popped out to Buddy Hassett, whose throw to Eddie Miller doubled up Hartnett at second. Miller then completed the triple play to Carvel Rowell, who caught Dallessandro off first base.

Lee was replaced by Charley Root when the Bees threatened in the last of the eighth but wound up as the winning pitcher.

Race Heads Hear Plea for Horse Marking

Identification Called 'Debt of State' to Race Track Fans

By the Associated Press

New York, July 25.—Standardization of the methods of identifying race horses as a protection to the public was urged today by George Foster, of Chicago, at the opening session of the two-day meeting of the National Association of State Racing Commissioners.

Foster, chairman of the association's identification committee, pointed out identification methods gradually are expanding to all States.

"Right now," he said, "the branding of horses as a means of identification has caught the eye of many."

Marshall Cassidy, steward of the New York commission, appealed to the commissioners for a "satisfactory identification system" as a "debt that each State owes to racing" and as a "safeguard and assurance to the public that the sport is being conducted under the fullest possible protection.

Deposed Coach Of Wisconsin Crew Demands Hearing

By the Associated Press

Madison, Wis., July 25.—Ralph Hunn, deposed University of Wisconsin crew coach, demanded a hearing today before the university athletic board while a threatened revolt against his dismissal developed among members of the Badger varsity and jayvee rowing squads.

Athletic Director Harry A. Stuhldreher disclosed yesterday Hunn had been dropped from the pay roll as of May 8. He gave no reasons.

Hunn claimed a request to Stuhldreher for a hearing before the athletic board had previously been denied.

Jack Cunning, coxswain and captain of the 1940 crew, said ". . . varsity and jayvee oarsmen will not care to continue rowing at Wisconsin unless they are informed of the nature of the charges against Hunn."

Arlitt Uses Nine Cats as Charm to Break Loss Streak

By the Associated Press

Hutchinson, Kans., July 25—Hutchinson's Pirates bought nine black cats from nine fans for $1 and ended their string of Western Association losses at nine games.

Manager Buzz Arlitt scatted one of the cats toward Joplin's pitcher, Johnny Orr, in the first inning—then drove in two runs.

In the ninth with the score 11-all two out and a runner on first, Arlitt and his cat strolled to the plate again.

His triple broke up the ball game.

Little Utica Star Meets Clark Today

Gallery Favorite Loses 10 Pounds Since Tournament Started, Weighs 138

By Steve Snider.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, July 25.—Plucky little Ed Furgol, of Utica, N. Y., lame-armed favorite of the galleries, today whipped the man who had tied him in the qualifying rounds with a record 133, and led a salesman, an automobile worker and a man who makes rubber tires into the semi-finals of the National Public Links Golf Tournament.

If the intense heat doesn't weaken him further, the 22-year-old metal polisher will be the title favorite. He meets giant-killler Bob Clark, 31-year-old physicians' supplies salesman from St. Paul, in the top 36-hole match tomorrow, and before that long trek is over Furgol may need some of Clark's stock.

Furgol has lost 10 pounds since the tournament started. He's down to 138 now—with not much more to lose and still play championship golf. His withered left arm is the result of an automobile accident a dozen years ago.

Dietz Meets Dolce Today

The lower bracket semifinal tomorrow brings together Mike Dietz, Detroit automobile worker, and Roy Dolce, of Denver, who helps make the tires for some of those cars Dietz works on. Dolce rates an edge in this one. He is a real scrambler—all over the course on his two matches today—but enough of a competitor to reach the quarter-finals at Baltimore last year.

Furgol, a Polish boy, ran into two of the tournament's toughest today. First he whipped Worth Stimits, jr., of Colorado Springs, who had tied him for the medal, 3 and 2.

Furgol went right to work on Stimits. By the time they hit the turn he was 3 up and Stimits never threatened dangerously although a chip shot 3 feet from the pin gave him the tenth hole. Furgol made it 3 up on the thirteenth when Stimits was trapped, and they halved through the sixteenth.

Harris Is Eliminated

Labron Harris, husky wrestling tutor in a Guthrie, Okla., high school, was next, and Furgol knocked him out, 4 and 3. They were even at the turn, but Furgol won the tenth with a 35-foot shot, the twelfth when Harris was trapped, and the thirteenth when Harris missed a 1-footer. Furgol clinched it on the fifteenth when Harris missed a 3-footer.

Clark had to battle hard all day. He was carried to the nineteenth hole by hot-shooting Charley Lind, Denver High School boy who scored rounds of 71, 68, 70, 73 and 70 during the tournament.

Lind sent the match to the extra hole by chipping in a 60-footer for a birdie on the eighteenth, but was wild off the nineteenth tee and Clark won it, 1 up.

Clark Defeats Jennings

Clark next eliminated Lou Jennings, Oregon amateur champion from Portland, in another close one. Jennings, bookkeeper in a bank, jumped in front by three holes on the first nine, but lost the tenth to Clark's birdie on a 7-foot putt, lost the eleventh by rolling into the high rough and had the match squared on the twelfth when Clark set down a neat stymie. Jennings went down for the first time on 17 where he drove into the rough, then blew his one chance to square it on the eighteenth by missing a 4-footer.

The upper bracket produced all the sensations for the second straight day. It was pretty much to form in the lower half, as Dolce waded through Edwin Harper, Pocatello, Idaho, 1 up in 20 holes and Mike Stefanchik, 26-year-old pipefitter in a Gary, Ind., steel mill, 2 up.

Dietz also had an easier time of it than the upper bracketeers, defeating Don Shock, of Dayton, Ohio, 6 and 5, and Jack Larose, former Detroit prep school champion, 3 and 2.

Cameo, O'Donnell To Battle Today

With the return of George and Francis Coakley from Clemson College to strengthen its lineup, Cameo Furniture, leader in The Washington Post Industrial League, squares off against O'Donnell's Sea Grill today on the South Ellipse at 5 p. m.

A previous clash between the teams this half ended in a dispute which caused the replaying of the game. "Lefty" Senge is expected to hurl for O'Donnell's, while either Otis Printz or Frank Deavers will work for the Furniture nine.

Chisox Streak Holds As Boston Bows, 6-4

Winners Take 7th Straight Victory as Cronin Club Assumes Eighth Defeat in Succession

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 25 (AP).—Chicago's White Sox continued their extra base walloping today and ran their string of victories to seven by defeating Boston's Red Sox, 6 to 4. The setback was Boston's eighth in a row and came despite two homers by Jim Tabor and another by teammate Bobby Doerr.

Joe Kuhel's eighteenth circuit smash, triples by Julius Solters, Luke Appling and Taft Wright and doubles by Mike Kreevich and Appling featured Chicago's 11-hit assault against Jim Bagby, jr.

Tabor's second homer, his fifteenth, came after Doerr singled with two out in the ninth and brought Clint Brown to the rescue of Jack Knott, who pitched eight-hit ball. Doerr and Tabor homered in succession in the fourth inning for Boston's other runs.

Fred Lindstrom Back in Baseball As Minor Manager

By the Associated Press

Knoxville, Tenn., July 25.—Freddie Lindstrom, one-time star third baseman of the New York Giants, was signed tonight as manager of the Knoxville club of the Southern Association. He succeeds Neil Caldwell, who was given his outright release.

Col. Bob Allen, owner of the cellar-dwelling Smokies, in announcing the signing of Lindstrom said: "We believe we got the best man available."

Lindstrom broke in with the Giants in 1923, was traded to the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1932 and in 1935 went to the Chicago Cubs in another trade. After a year with the Cubs he was given his release and has been out of baseball since.

Lindstrom is 34 and had a lifetime major league batting average of .320. He will manage the club from the bench.

Jewett Paces Attack For Winners in Departmental Game

Firing a consistent, heady brand of ball at its foe, I. D. R. A. turned in an impressive 5-2 victory over Maritime Commission yesterday in the Departmental League as Jewett paced the attack with a double and triple.

The Interior nine was never behind after opening the game with a run in the first inning, though Maritime managed to tie it up 1-1 in the third. The pitching for I. D. R. A. was split between Stant and Jewett, who allowed nine scattered blows.

Arrow Cabmen Take 6-3 Edge

Arrow was the victor in yesterday's session of the cab baseball warfare of Washington, a 6-3 judgment going to the fast nine after an exciting battle with Premier.

The losers jumped into a 2-0 lead in the opening frame and it took Arrow until the fourth inning to knot the count. Then, with runs in the fifth, sixth and seventh, Arrow soared into a convincing lead. Murphy's eight-hit hurling featured the winners' effort as much as the slugging of Martin and Clarridge. Murphy also got a pair of hits in four times at the plate.

Mounts Seeking

Mount Rainer A. C. is seeking a game for August 4 with a strong unlimited team having a diamond. Its manager may be reached at Warfield 4154.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

The standout performer among the Nats yesterday was, beyond any doubt, Jimmy Pofahl, and to him goes the chief award in the Man of the Month contest.

To Pofahl, eight points, because he made three hits and drew a walk in his four trips to the plate, because his second-inning double figured in the Nats' only two runs and because he played a brilliant game in the field all afternoon.

To Dutch Leonard, six points, because of the four runs he allowed was helped by errors behind him.

To George Case, five points, because he made two hits, walked twice and stole two bases.

To Rick Ferrell, three points, because he drove in a run with his second-inning double. The totals:

Sidney Hudson	51	Buddy Lewis	24
Buddy Myer	49	Rene Monteagudo	17
George Case	41	Alex Carrasquel	10
Rick Ferrell	38	Joe Krakauskas	5
Ken Chase	33	Jimmy Bloodworth	5

Heurich Brewers Beat Russell Motors, 5 to 1

First Half Winners of Post Industrial League Now Within Half Game of Cameo Nine; Clements Loses Six-Hitter

As has been its custom, Heurich Brewer nine spotted its opponent, Russell Motors, a lead yesterday and then came with a rush to take a 5-1 victory in The Washington Post Industrial League. The decision brought the first-half winners to within a half-game of the league-leading Cameo club.

The Motormen's only tally came in the third inning and accounted for a lead which lasted until Heurich turned in a three-run spree in the fourth. From then on it was all Heurich.

It was a bitter loss for Russell's Johnny Clements, who held the champs to six safeties while his mates were garnering eight off the slants of Walter James. Brewer, Kaufman and Walters led the slugging with extra-base hits.

Pirates Score In Ninth, Beat Giants, 2 to 1

Schumacher Only Gives Six Hits, but Loses; Sewell Hurls 7th Victory

By the Associated Press

New York, July 25.—Hard luck dogged Hal Schumacher again today as the Pittsburgh Pirates overcame his six-hit pitching to nose out the New York Giants 2 to 1, scoring the deciding run in the ninth inning without a hit.

The Pirates loaded the bases on a walk, a sacrifice, an error by Shortstop Glen Stewart, and an intentional pass before Pitcher Truett (Rip) Sewell sent a long fly along the leftfield foul line to score Elbie Fletcher.

Sewell kept nine hits scattered in achieving his seventh victory against two defeats, causing the Giants to leave 11 runners stranded. The only score against him came in the fifth when the Giants loaded the bases on a single, an error by Sewell on a bunt, and a hit batsman, one run eventually scoring on Harry Danning's fly to center.

The Pirates pushed across their first run in the first inning on singles by Paul Waner, Deb Garms and Fletcher.

Terrapins Face Penn as Highlight of 9-Game Grid Schedule

Rutgers Set As Turkey Day Foe

15 Lettermen Invited To Start Training Sept. 2; Virginia U. Is Homecoming Foe

Unabashed by a 1939 grid record lacking considerable in brilliance, Maryland University through Athletic Director Geary Eppley yesterday released what promises to be one of the Terp's toughest schedules in years.

Nine games are listed, the main addition being a scrap with Penn's warriors on October 5 as the second game on the card. The tussle will take place in Philadelphia. Hampden-Sydney's forces furnish opening competition on September 28 after a training session which will start September 2 for hopeful Terrapin candidates.

Though Maryland will be hard pressed against a Penn club which is expected to be exceptionally strong this season, the records indicate the Terps may hold their own. In a meeting two years ago, the teams battled on even terms for four quarters, Penn finally ekeing out a 28-21 decision.

Rutgers, which ground out a 25-12 victory over the Terps last year, will furnish Thanksgiving Day competition. The game will be played in Baltimore's stadium to accommodate as many fans as possible. Homecoming honors will be given Virginia, which supplied one of the College Park eleven's toughest battles in 1939.

Approximately 25 members of last year's squad, including 15 lettermen, and about 16 sophomores, have been asked to report, Eppley said. Chief losses through graduation will be Boyda, Mondorff and Skotnicki in the backfield, Beamer at end, Brown at tackle and Lawrence at guard. Young backs from whom a great deal is expected are Joe Murphy, Merrill Duvall and Milt Lumsden.

The schedule:

September 28—Hampden-Sydney at College Park.
October 5—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.
October 12—(Homecoming) Virginia at College Park.
October 19—Florida at Gainesville.
October 25—Western Maryland at Baltimore.
November 9—Georgetown at College Park.
November 16—Virginia Military Institute at Lynchburg.
November 21—Rutgers at Baltimore.
November 30—Washington and Lee at College Park.

Western Stars Win W. B. C. Clash, 8 to 6

Garner Is Winning Pitcher as Nichols, Pellitt Pace Hitting

The Western Division defeated the Eastern Division in the Boys Club's annual all-star game, 8 to 6, yesterday.

Lefty Garner went the route for the winners, and although he was touched for 13 hits, he kept them well scattered.

Centerfielder Nichols and Catcher Pollitt led the batting attack for the Western Division with three hits apiece. Nichols also contributed a perfect throw from the outfield to cut off a rally in the eighth inning.

Kemp, Errico and Kilgallon collected three hits apiece for the Eastern all-stars.

Georgian Leads Contest For Sailfish

42-Pounder Gives Cook Chance for Top Prize at Jacksonville

Special Dispatch to The Post

Jacksonville, Fla., July 25.—A gentlemen from Georgia got the thrill of his lifetime and captured the lead in the Jacksonville Sailfish Derby last week-end by hooking and landing a 7-foot 2-inch beauty of a sail that tipped the beam at 42 pounds.

Largest entry so far in the sailfish classification of the $2,000 Jacksonville Fishing Tournament, this catch was the climax of a 21-day period during which, to the amazement and delight of local fishing enthusiasts, these fighting tackle-busters have been brought in at a rate averaging better than one sailfish per boat each day.

The lucky angler, Marcus Cook, of Atlanta, has put himself in a good spot to win a $135 rod and reel by this feat. And he has at least temporarily snatched top honors in the tournament away from the eager grasp of competing fishermen from the Carolinas, Alabama, Tennessee, Illinois and many other States, including Georgia and Florida. Jacksonville's newly acquired fame as a sports fishing center has spread rapidly up the country, and anglers from far and near are coming to try for prizes and thrills in this city's third annual tournament.

Large tarpon, amberjack, barracuda, crevalle, bonita, red bass and other big game are also being boated daily in the waters off Jacksonville, but the remarkable success with sailfish has stolen the spotlight somewhat from these less spectacular fighters.

Spud Hanover Wins Goldsmith Trotting Stake

Captures Feature In Straight Heats; Miller's Charge Victor

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., July 25.—Facing the sternest test of his career, the 4-year-old Spud Hanover, from the stables of E. Roland Harriman, this afternoon won the Goldsmith Maid Stake, feature event of the Grand Circuit racing program here.

The son of Guy McKinney was driven to straight-heat victories in 2:04½ and 2:06¼ in this mile trot for 4 and 5-year-olds, with a purse value of $3,325, this stake was the richest in the career of Spud Hanover.

W. E. Miller's Pioneer Hanover, took the supplementary feature, the third division pace of the Trotting Club Stake, in straight heats. His time in the first heat, 2:02¼, was the fastest of the meeting.

Misses Kirby, Cothran Reach Golf Semifinals

Asheville, N. C., July 25 (AP).—Medalist Dorothy Kirby and defending Champion Jane Cothran swept with ease through second-round matches today and tomorrow morning will meet in the feature semifinals tilt of Biltmore Forest's annual women's invitation golf tournament.

Miss Kirby, of Atlanta, even with men's par for the 11 holes her match lasted, walloped Mrs. W. G. Wilmer, of Biltmore Forest, 9 and 7. Miss Cothran was only three over men's par as she defeated Eliza Coxe, of Asheville, 6 and 5.

Start of Good Catch

Airport Swim Meet Draws Strong Field

Russell Outstanding In Diving Action; Shoreham Preparing

With registrations from many New York swimming clubs in the fold, entries for the A. A. U. diving meet and 440-yard free style championships at the Airport Pool Monday night continued to come at an encouraging rate.

Jimmy Russell, winner of the meet for the past two seasons, has been named as the one to beat in the springboard end of the meet. His most serious competition will probably come from the New York entries and Bill Tarbett, Washington's most experienced diver.

The Shoreham women's diving team informed Pool Manager Hardy Pearce yesterday that it will be at full strength for the women's share of the honors. Included in the Shoreham entry is Patsy Palmer, whose swimming feats are well known in this area.

Not so speedy, however, were the entries for the 440-yard free style championships of the District for both men and women. However, Pearce hopes to have a last-minute rush of registrations, as was the case at the recent Airport Pool swimming meet.

Approximately 25 divers are expected to compete for the three handsome trophies which are to be awarded to the first, second and third place winners.

Entries for both the diving and swimming ends of the program may be made at 230 C street northwest, and with Hardy Pearce at the Airport Pool.

Riddle Gelding Is Close Victor At Suffolk Oval

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 25.—Glenn Riddle Farms' Battle Colors, a gelded son of Man O' War-Beaugingham, scored an impressive length and a quarter win in the Waverly, $1,000 allowance over 5 furlongs at Suffolk Downs today.

Battle Colors went the five-eighths in 0:59 1-5, only two-fifths off the track record. T. D. Buhl's Le Chat ran second, a length in front of N. L. Nathanson's General Jack.

The winner, which made his bow here a week ago in a maiden sprint for $3,500 platers and won handily, paid $7.20, $4.20 and $3. Le Chat paid $3.80 and $3.20, while General Jack returned $4.

Feller to Lose Tooth Because of Accident

Cleveland, July 25 (AP).—Pitcher Bob Feller, struck on the face by a thrown ball, will lose a tooth because of the accident, Feller's dentist decided today.

Examination showed the Cleveland Indians' star received a cracked tooth on the upper left side of his mouth, but suffered no other ill effects from yesterday's mishap in a pre-game practice. The dentist, Dr. Gordon Richter, said he would extract the molar Saturday.

Butcher-Swimmer Ends First Lap Of Record Paddle

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 25.—John V. Sigmund, St. Louis butcher, who is trying for a new world's distance swimming record, was somewhere south of Chester, Ill., tonight on the second leg of his 292-mile course down the Mississippi River to Caruthersville, Mo.

The present record is 288 miles, set by Clarence Giles, of Billings, Mont., on the Yellowstone River two years ago.

Sigmund was coated with grease to overcome both chill and the burning hot sun. He was fed in the water by his wife, who accompanied him in a cabin cruiser. Also on the boat was an official of the A. A. U., who was judge and timer.

City Leaders Plan to See McDowell Bout

3 Commissioners, G-Man Hoover, Congressmen Expected at Stadium

The City Fathers, Congressional leaders and many local celebrities will be on hand for Monday night's boxing show featuring Holman Williams, Joe Louis' welterweight protege, against Wild Bill McDowell, and presenting Louis as referee of the semiwindup bout at Griffith Stadium.

Promoter Joe Turner, happy as a lark with the interest displayed and the way reservations are pouring in, stated that special ringside invitations had been accepted by Melvin C. Hazen, John Russell Young and David McCoach, jr., the three Commissioners of the District.

This, according to Turner, is the first time the three city fathers ever have been present together at a boxing show locally.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief G-Man, a close friend of Heavyweight Champion Louis, will attend with several members of his staff, and Congressman Fred Hartley, who was instrumental in legalizing boxing in the District, informed Turner that a dozen of his friends in Congress had stated they would be on hand to see the ten-round Williams-McDowell bout, and the Brown Bomber referee and six-rounder between Gilbert Mayo, of Alexandria, and Vince Truminello, of Baltimore, who, like Louis, are champions from the Golden Gloves ranks campaigning for gold and glory as professionals.

Williams will arrive this morning. With him will be Larry Almeda, one of the country's top trainers, the gent who trained John Henry Lewis, former world's light-heavyweight champion. Almeda, who is regarded as tops when it comes to bandagetaping and conditioning fighters, will handle Williams until "Chappie" Blackburne, Louis' own trainer, comes to town. Almeda and "Chappie," and possibly Louis will work from Williams' corner Monday night.

Williams, third ranking welterweight of the world, drills publicly today at 1:30 at the arena, and again tomorrow. Heinie Miller, N. B. A. president, considers Williams one of the hardest hitters in the welterweight division, Armstrong not excluded.

White Marlin Run Starts Off Ocean City

Capt. Lombard Gets 1st Specimen; Ocean Teeming With Fish

Special Dispatch to The Post

Ocean City, Md., July 25.—Numerous radiophone reports of catches from Capt. Lev Raymond on his Lev-Lou indicated the annual white marlin run off Ocean City was off to a banner start today.

First-of-the-season honors went to Capt. Jim Lombard, who caught, tagged and released a prize specimen from his Jim Dandie. Lombard thus conformed with the rules of the contest for the Paul and Jack Townsend Award, a plaque offered by a wild-life illustrator along with $100 in cash.

Lombard's catch came approximately 28 miles southeast of Ocean City in the famous Jack Spot area. The ocean was said to be fairly teeming with marlin in the vicinity.

Reports also came in of catches by Capt. Ches Gray from the Hilda, Capt. Mathis from the Whichfin, and Capt. Voss from the Lucky Lady.

Because the reports were through ship to ship radiophone only, it was impossible to ascertain exactly how many other fishermen had registered catches.

Dodgers Get Grissom From Montreal Club

By the Associated Press

New York, July 25.—The Brooklyn Dodgers made an effort to strengthen their pitching staff today when they brought in Lee Grissom, left-handed hurler, from their Montreal farm in the International League.

Newt Kimball, rookie right-hander, and Lou Fette, veteran hurler, who has seen little action since leaving the Boston Bees, were sent to Montreal.

ON FISHING

Marlin Have Moved in Along the Coast From Hatteras to Montauk; Ocean City Season Late

The first white marlin of the Montauk season was boated last Sunday. It weighed 95 pounds and was further proof that these fish have moved in along the coast from Hatteras to Montauk, their northernmost feeding grounds. It bears out the contention of Paul Townsend about the lateness of the Ocean City season that when they did arrive it would be all at once—the regular August school marlin.

More interesting news from Montauk, however, was the bringing in of several more broadbill swordfish by rod and reelers; confirming the statements of many sportsmen that this is the greatest swordfish year they have ever known. Most certainly it is the best chance we have ever seen for any angler to crash the piscatorial high places by catching this greatest of all the big game fishes.

ACKERMAN

The channel bass along Maryland beaches have been forced offshore by the continued southwest winds, particularly on the Fox Hill Levels, where such winds rile the inshore waters so badly they are untenantable for anything in' skate.

It is hardly likely the run will get under way again until mid-August or later.

In connection with surf-fishing in this area, we note that the fisherman's lodge at the North Beach Coast Guard Station has been closed. However, for those who do not mind cooking their own, the small cabins are still available.

Catches of sea bass, porgies and fluke continue unabated, from Cape Henlopen to Cape Charles. At the latter place the big cobia are continuing numerous and large.

In bay waters the best going still is on the Eastern Shore and on the Middles below Point Lookout. Hardheads of course, but with an ever-increasing number of trout being caught with them.

The first cobia of the season were caught by St. Jeromes Creek boats this past week. Two of them—each weighing 50 pounds.

Early morning and late evening are still the best hours for fishing. As to whether the croakers are in the deep or shallow waters, we aren't going to say, for after being in deep waters for more than a week, just as the weekenders started out for them last Saturday the fish crossed us up by biting best in under the shore.

Bass fishermen have been finding better than fair going at Pennyfields, Seneca, in the Monacacy and Bennett Creek and at Point of Rocks. We believe it will continue over this week-end if the rainfall wasn't too heavy over the upper reaches of the Potomac.

No. 5 marlin at Ocean City was caught on Capt. Leo Droughton's Sampan on Tuesday. Another small fish—it weighed approximately 50 pounds—and further proof that it will only be the small school fish that will run this year—none of the big fellows that come singly and in pairs early in July.

Five Collect $1,108.80 on Daily Double at Bel Air Track

Chide Pays $125.40 in Second Race

Distant Star Starts Huge Payoff; Feature Won by Schley Goree

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Bel Air, Md., July 25.—The daily double, Maryland's own share-the-wealth plan, continued to pay off in fortunes today when five lucky ticket-holders stepped up to the cashier's window and collected $1,108.80 for a piece of cardboard which cost $2 an hour before. While this grand and glorious operation was in progress, upward of 100 betters were taking down a $125.40 individual mutuel on Chide, winner of the second race. The 4-year-old, owned by Mrs. I. K. Mourar and ridden by Apprentice R. Sisto, who was making his first visit to the winner's circle, was the chief cause of the box-car figure on the double.

The horse that started the pay-off was Distant Star, owned by Mrs. John E. Hughes, of Washington, D. C. This 2-year-old daughter of Dr. Freeland was a modest $6.30 shot and won in a gallop by 2½ lengths.

Second Highest Double of Track

The double was the second highest in the history of this track. The record was the $1,119.60 paid last July 31 on Mrs. G. H. Pearce's Canwyn and E. K. Moore's Mirmiss. Chide's pay-off was second on the records here. The mark is held by E. A. Roast's Krakatoa, which paid $134 on August 2, 1938.

The Forest Hill Purse, featuring the program, went to Schley Goree, owned by R. A. Bowman, jr., and capably ridden by Jockey George Watson, a newcomer to this circuit. Schley Goree, making his twenty-fourth start of the year, hung up his third victory officially and his fourth when his disqualification at Hagerstown is considered.

Winner Scores By Neck

Watson pounded the big son of Ed Crump home to win by a neck margin over J. E. Crider's Little Harpist. Summer Stock, the favorite, nosed Blind Brook out of third money in the thrilling blanket finish. Schley Goree lacked backers today and paid a $28.20 mutuel.

For the second straight day, the colors of J. H. C. Forbes were the winner in the day's steeplechase. Jockey J. Haley rode his second jumping winner aboard Baffler, an 8-year-old gelding.

Blue Flyer Takes Arlington Feature

Chicago, July 25 (AP).—Blue Flyer, a 3-year-old son of Blue Larkspur, owned by John Marsch, of Chicago, drove to a hard-earned victory today in the Fox Lake Purse at Arlington Park. Despite the heat, a crowd of 10,000 persons turned out.

Close up throughout, Blue Flyer outgamed Milky Way's Royal Edict in the stretch to win by three-quarters of a length. Young and Rogers' Soup and Fish was a head back in third. Win price on Blue Flyer was $7.20 and the time was 1:11 4-5 for the 6 furlongs. Al Snider was aboard the winner.

11 Tents Solve Stable Worry At Cumberland

Huge Canvas to House 500 Race Horses; Flat Race Arranged

By the Associated Press

Cumberland, Md., July 25.—The housing problem at Cumberland's half-mile race track has been solved—with tents.

Eleven large tents have been brought to Fairgo to take care of the overflow of horses expected here for the ten-day meeting August 6-10 and August 13-17.

President Harry Manley said each tent would accommodate 12 horses.

Racing Secretary Edward J. Brennan was in a quandary before the tents were obtained. Reservations had been made for 450 to 500 horses and there is stall space for only about 400.

A flat race of two miles and a sixteenth is being arranged as a feature of the second week's program. Heretofore the longest flat race has been over a mile and three-quarters.

Bill Bennings —At the Post

Selections at Bel Air

Dear Al:

Miss Vivian Thayer, secretary to General Manager G. Ray Bryson, reports that the opening day crowd bet $152,587, as compared with $11,732 last year. That kind of a handle on a week day certainly takes Bel Air out of the small track class. The record play for a day here is $205,390 on Saturday, August 5, 1939. This figure may go by the boards tomorrow. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan has two handicaps for the week-end program, the $1,000 Country Life Farm Handicap and the $600 Caves Farm. The latter is a steeplechase affair. Friend W. P. Cox, of the B & O., denies that the late post time was the fault of the race special. "We are getting them here with time to spare," says Cox, and he should know. Distant Star, winner of yesterday's first race, jumped out of a van and went on the track to win. J. Bowes Bond tells me he will take 12 horses to Cumberland. Mrs. John A. Manfuso was a visitor, stopping off on the way home from a visit to her children at a Northern summer camp. Jockey Danny Scocca, set down at Hagerstown, will not be allowed to take mounts until Cumberland. The funny department: One of the former jockeys here was telling about a horse he rode years ago. The trainer had been getting bad rides and claimed the jockeys were pulling his horse. This jockey said he would win. The trainer was in the centerfield near the stretch turn when his horse came by ten lengths in front of the nearest rival. The jockey yelled to him "How 'm I doing, boss?" The trainer yelled back, "You're doing all right, son. But don't change your mind." Victor Noyes, owner and trainer here, is a former football star. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race — Asunder was well meant last out and belongs in juvenile company of this sort. I'm going to string along. Smoke Gal is a fair sort and has speed enough to be dangerous. Tar Anne showed good foot at Hagerstown and should make a money appearance.

Second race — Blenethel failed when oppposed by maiden company at the other track. Perhaps these turns will suit. I'm inclined to string along with this one. Birthday Miss' last was promising and she probably will be in the money circle. Blenheim Rose seldom runs this cheap and is a threat.

Third race — Forest Charm has been groomed for a jumping race of this kind. Carries top weight, but I will have to string along. Edwin Booth has worked well and is dangerous. Judge's Bid comes off the flat, but may be a keen contender.

Fourth race—Serrano is the speed of this party, but is a doubtful starter. If taken off the reserve list, I would have to be there. Accidental was miserably handled last out and should have won. Needs better handling. Deodo is a long-shot possibility.

Fifth race — Pandoramint shapes up well in this field. Has the early speed necessary to escape trouble and should stay on top. The Lewis entry of Goodwine and Ace of Trumps is formidable, but the latter is a doubtful start. Lula Khayyam is fit as hands make horses and should be prominent.

Sixth race—Dressmaker has been running good races of late and finds a spot here that seems to suit. I see no reason for mistakes. Razzle Dazzle has worked briskly and is a threat. Exhort likes a longer route, but is dangerous.

Seventh race — Moon Harvest jogged in front of a Charles Town field and appears capable of turning back this opposition. Trostar is fit and ready, but may not like the top assignment. Victory Light is good now.

Eighth race—Dulie, second on the also eligible list, appears the best in the line-up for the day's finale. Sunny Rose and Chalotaur were winners recently and are good. The Bennings Stable's Clymene will be right in there knocking and I'm going to try her.

Best bet—Dressmaker.

Williamstown Takes Empire Sprint Race

Don Meade Completes Double on Winfrey's Horse in Fifth

By the Associated Press

Empire City Race Track, Yonkers, N. Y., July 25.—The second half of New York's 174-day racing season, a big success to date, got under way here this muggy, hot afternoon. The nearest thing to a feature was the short 6-furlong fifth event, for $2,500 platers.

Don Meade, enjoynig one of his frequent good days in the saddle, scored his second straight triumph in this dash. Meade was aboard Mrs. G. C. Winfrey's $4.60 for $2 choice, Williamstown, which beat B. F. Whitaker's Hi Gold by a head in 1:09 2-5. W. H. Gallagher's US caught in a jam between the first two horses as she tried to battle for the lead in the stretch, was third, three lengths away.

A crowd of 10,917 saw the races decided over a fast track.

Meade, whose forte is keeping a horse going long enough to thwart his challengers, had to perform this feat on both Williamstown and Shaheen, his previous victor. Williamstown was behind Us and Commencement for slightly more than a quarter mile, then Meade urged the Winfrey sprinter into a narrow lead. Although not able to get clear, Williamstown gamely clung to his narrow advantage as Hi Gold replaced the unfortunate Us as the one to beat.

Grace Urges 'Adequate' Arms Profits

Head of Bethlehem Reports Record Peacetime Orders

New York, July 25.—Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, foreshadowing a big expansion in the company's armament and shipbuilding facilities for the national defense program, called today for "adequate profits" or Government money to finance the new facilities.

At the same time the country's second largest steel concern reported a peacetime record of orders on its books. These stood at $285,521,487 on June 30, and Grace said about $200,000,000 of naval orders had been received since that time.

Two Ways Possible

The money for expanded arms production, by Bethlehem and others, Grace said, must come in one of two ways.

"Either the Government must supply the money or it must permit private interests who do provide the money to get sufficient business and make sufficient profits to compensate them for creating these facilities.

"I do not think that where the articles have no commercial value we have a right, nor do we care, to spend the stockholders' money."

Grace's statement was made as the company announced its net income for the quarter ended June 30 was $10,807,318 or $3.07 a common share. This compared with $3,822,827 or 61 cents a common share in the June, 1939, quarter and with $10,891,139, or $3.02 a common share, in the March quarter this year. The company called an issue of 5 per cent preferred in April this year.

U. S. Pays for Extensions

Grace said the Government already is paying for the extension of some of Bethlehem's facilities, and said the Govrenment "owns such extensions 10 per cent."

The amount of money necessary to take care of facilities for the $200,000,000 in Navy orders recently received, Grace said, was "surprisingly small." But he added that the next step in the naval building program would require "much more shipbuilding expansion." Armor plate and gun manufacture likewise will require more plant facilities, Grace added.

Directors of Bethlehem declared a dividend of $1.25 a common share, payable September 3 to holders of record August 9. A similar payment was made in June, and in January $1 was paid.

Rail Loadings 12% Heavier Than Year Ago

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 729,897 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 10,568 cars, or 1.4 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 78,232, or 12 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 149,079, or 25.7 per cent, compared with 1938.

The decrease in six of the ten classifications, with only forest products and ore showing substantial upturns, made the decline in total loadings more than is normally expected at this time of the year.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of loadings, based on 1929-30 as 00, declined to 73.8 compared with 74.7 the previous week, and 86.4 a year ago.

Bank Clearings Up 2.4% in Week

New York, July 25 (AP).—Bank clearings in 23 leading cities of the United States in the week ended July 24 totaled $5,367,508,000, an increase of 2.4 per cent over the $5,241,618,000 for the like week last year, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Latest check transactions, however, were $87,090,000 less than in the preceding week. A year ago, there was a rise of $319,843,000 between the two corresponding 1939 weeks.

New York City clearings at $3,076,751,000 were 2.2 per cent under the $3,147,012,000 of the 1939 comparative. For the cities, excluding New York City, check transactions were $2,290,757,000, a gain of 9.4 per cent over the $2,094,606,000 in the like 1939 period.

Rolling Mill Declares Dividen; Net Mounts

Middeltown, Ohio, July 25 (AP).—Directors of the American Rolling Mill Co. declared a dividend of $1.12½ a share on the company's 4½ per cent cumulative preferred stock. It will be paid August 30 to stockholders of record August 5.

The company reported consolidated net earnings of $1,079,403 for the second quarter after depreciation and Federal taxes, bringing to $2,084,599 net earnings for the first half of the year, compared with $1,669,151 for the like period in 1939.

Commodities Move Higher; Grains Lower

Wheat, Corn Slump On Promised Break In Heat Wave

By the Associated Press

Various key commodities reached better price levels yesterday and it seemed as if traders, in a small way, were more willing to assume purchases on the basis of the recent drop in values.

Grains at Chicago countered the advance. A promised break in the heat wave was an important factor in declines of ⅜ to ¾ cent a bushel in wheat and ⅝ to 1 cent in corn.

At New York wool tops and hides showed real buoyancy on the prospect for large demand for finished materials to equip the augmented armed forces expected under the pending military expansion bill. The "tops" pushed up 3.2 to 3.5 cents a pound. Hides rose .20 to .25 of a cent a pound. Rubber was unchanged at .60 of a cent higher.

Cottonseed oil and Santos coffee prices dropped back a notch.

Exchange Heads Invited to Parley On Act Revision

Members of the Securities Commission invited New York Stock Exchange officials yesterday to participate in conferences on possible amendment to the securities law.

William McC. Martin, governor of the exchange, and three associates, went to the commission to report on progress in connection with a study of the exchange made some time ago by the public examining board, and the invitation to join in the talk on amendments grew out of the meeting.

The SEC began a series of conferences last week on possible changes in the 1933 and 1934 Securities Act with representatives of the Investment Bankers Association, and the National Association of Securities dealers. These two groups and the commission already have agreed on a recommendation for an immediate amendment to relax a 20-day "cooling" period which must elapse before new securities may be offered to the public.

War Machines Need Time, Sloan Warns

New York, July 25 (AP).—Any expectation that "miracles can be performed overnight" in production of war machines needed for national defense "can only lead to confusion in the program and to unnecessary disappointment," Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, told stockholders in a special message yesterday.

Sloan also cautioned against needless interruption of production of goods and materials essential to the normal requirements of the country, saying that internal economy will be strengthened if production which does not interfere with defense work can be maintained actively.

Ickes Rejects City's Proposal To Lease Utility

San Francisco Gets Additional Time On Pacific Gas Plan

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes rejected yesterday a proposal by the city of San Francisco to lease the $65,000,000 Pacific Gas & Electric Power Co.'s distribution system in San Francisco and said he would give the city another 60 or 90 days in which to rewrite its proposed contract.

The Secretary acted on recommendation of his legal staff which held that the proposed lease did not comply with provisions of the Raker Act which required the city to own and operate the distribution facilities.

He said the lease, as drawn, made the company an agency of the city whereas the law specified that the municipality must not deal through a second party.

The corporation was formed by public utility district commissioners to seek acquisition of the Puget Sound concern through negotiation and purchase. Another group of commissioners seeks to acquire Puget Sound through condemnation proceedings in Federal Court.

Frank McLaughlin, president of Puget Sound, could not be reached tonight for comment.

Six Reasons Cited for Dull Stock Deals

Foremost Is the Desire To Wait Decision in Battle of England

Why is stock market trading the dullest in 22 years—since the end of the World War—despite expansion of industrial activity to the highest levels in a decade for this season and sharp improvement in corporation profits?

Here are some reasons given by analysts:

(1) Withdrawal of speculators from the market to await a decision in the Battle of England, on which great economic questions are held to depend.

(2) Anticipation of higher taxes in the United States, including levies on excess corporate profits and prospect these may absorb much of the anticipated gain in earnings.

(3) An urge to mark time until the Presidential election moves toward a more nearly conclusive stage.

(4) Loss of trading contracts with continental Europe's financial centers and war-time restrictions in Canada and England.

(5) The transition from peacetime to war production.

(6) Possibility of a sharp and sudden, although perhaps temporary, business setback in event of early peace in Europe.

World Supremacy of Dollar Is Not an Unmixed Blessing

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

Economic Commentator.

Recent events in European affairs have pushed the dollar into unquestioned leadership in the currencies of the world. This was recognized recently when Marshal Petain sought to tie the French franc to the dollar instead of to the pound sterling.

Since the outbreak of the war there has been a two-fold market for the pound sterling—the so-called "official market" and the "free market." Under the stress of developments the British Exchange authority has tended to reduce the so-called "free market" and gradually most sterling transactions have come to be handled at the "official rate," whereby sterling is "pegged" at a fixed ratio to the dollar.

With other major currencies anchoring themselves to the dollar, the latter has been recognized as prime among the currencies of the world.

Ever since the outbreak of the first World War in 1914, the dollar has been in position to dispute the former unquestioned international primacy of the pound sterling.

However, after devaluation in 1934, following a previous action by Great Britain in abandoning the fixed gold standard, the French franc for several years enjoyed a temporarily leadership, which ended when France, for a second time, bowed to the devaluation fashion.

In spite of her military advances, Germany has not yet succeeded in developing a currency which free men in other lands voluntarily accept as an international yardstick. This is because of the varieties of marks which the Reich has used as instruments for international manipulation.

If international affairs were in a happier state, Americans might take great pride in the new evidences that New York has become the undisputed financial center.

But in view of the unfortunate and unsuccessful experience of the United States in war loans during the first World War and in post-war foreign loans, there is growing disposition to view critically opportunities which come to an international lender.

At present, existing laws restrict the creditor career of the United States. The Johnson Act forbids loans to nations who are in default to the Treasury on war loan account, and the amended Neutrality Act as formulated last autumn interdicts the sale of materials to belligerents except on a "cash and carry" basis.

After this war is over, there is likely to be widespread opposition in the United States to a renewal of a career of financial imperialism. This will especially be true if the totalitarian nations are left in a position of increased world power.

There is an important body of public opinion which believes that the destiny of the United States is primarily in the home market. This bloc argues that the analogy of Great Britain as an international leader in the decades before 1914 is delusive, as the British Isles were small and limited in natural resources, and that over there the theory of progress was to finance outlying raw material regions which could swap farm products for British manufactured goods. On the other hand, the United States is vastly more nearly self-contained, and it still has within its own borders great need for saving to develop and extend home facilities.

Thus, though the dollar is prime, there will be important opposition to repeating the experience of the gay twenties when American investment banking houses sent salesminded emissaries around the world to whoop up a demand for dollar loans.

Bethlehem and U. S. Steel Turn Buoyant; Remainder of List Remains Sluggish

New York, July 25.—Trading on the Stock Exchange was slightly more active than on the previous day, when a new record since 1918 was established, but the difference was not startling and securities continued to move within the narrow range which had held them within its grasp for about a month. The composite average showed a gain of 0.06 point and the volume was 244,800 shares.

The only explanation is that the day produced nothing decisive in the way of foreign war news, domestic political news nor domestic business news.

Everyone in the street is wondering why the list stays within its narrow bounds—a region that is more circumscribed than at any time in the last two decades. It isn't natural and the street is wondering if some law was passed recently without their taking note of it, which proscribed that the average should be held within the limits of 97-¼ and 98-¼.

Wait Major Battle

The lack of definite information appears to be a good explanation. The major attack on Great Britain has not yet developed. It is threatened, as it has been for weeks, and the attitude of the public is that they won't buy or sell another five shares until it happens.

There were few fluctuations of moment on the big board today. Loft was the most active stock and was well supported. Steel and Bethlehem did well, adding about a point each. The steel group was the best behaved of the entire list. There was fair support for the motors and aviations.

Foreign Bonds Rally

Listed bonds remained extremely dull today, with domestic issues mostly lower, while foreign dollar securities rallied to a degree. Trading amounted only to $3,160,000, which means the continuance of the series of excessively slow business. Most changes were fractional, but the thin market made a few variations of a point or more possible. United States Treasury issues held close to previous levels, and best grade corporate loans also were dull.

In the foreign department bonds of the belligerent countries mostly improved, but there were a few exceptions. The delay in the blitzkreig against England apparently is producing a cautious resumption of buying. Australian municipal bonds showed largest advances. Issues of the German-occupied countries were dull, owing to the lack of progress in the Havana conference.

Speculative railroad bonds drifted slightly lower, in most instances, but some bonds ran counter to the general trend. Alleghany Corporation issues were dull and unchanged while utility holding bonds also lacked interest. The share privilege group was neglected, and little developed in other sections.

$310,000,000 Drop Recorded In Idle Money

Bank Reserves Cut By U. S. Treasury Borrowing

By the Associated Press

Treasury borrowing sliced $310,000,000 off of idle money in the banks last week.

The Federal Reserve Board said the reduction brought the total of such funds down to $6,570,000,000 and interrupted a series of weekly records which have been set by the figure.

The Treasury last week sold $600,000,000 of bonds to the public, but only about half of the borrowing was reflected in excess reserves.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended July 24 member bank reserve balances decreased $298,000,000. Reductions in member banks' reserves arose from increases of $365,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks, $28,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and $30,000,000 in Treasury cash, and a decrease of $10,000,000 in Reserve Bank credit, offset in part by increases of $111,000,000 in gold stock and $4,000,000 in Treasury currency and a decrease of $18,000,000 in money in circulation. Excess reserves of member banks on July 24 were estimated to be approximately $6,570,000,000 a decrease of $310,000,000 for the week.

Hampton Roads, Beehive of First World War, Revives on $242,869,750 Appropriations

By the Associated Press

Hampton Roads, Va., July 25.—Strategic Hampton Roads, including its great shipyards, naval base and air stations, is fast becoming one of the busiest scenes in the national defense program.

The millions of dollars set aside for preparedness are being transformed in part in this vast aggregation of facilities into warships, enlarged bases and all the essentials that go to strengthening the important coast defenses.

The Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., of Newport News; the Norfolk Navy Yard, at Portsmouth; the Norfolk Naval Air Station, the Naval Operating Base and the Langley Field Air Base, all are or will be sharing in the program that is making Tidewater Virginia hum with activity unlike anything seen here since World War days.

More Funds Expected

Representative W. Darden, jr., of the Second District, issued a list of work authorized for the Norfolk-Portsmouth area and intimated that additional funds were likely to be made available beyond the $242,869,750 already appropriated.

In the Congressman's list, work proposed for Langley Field, the general headquarters airforce base, was not included, nor a proposed new wing at the Naval Hospital, at Portsmouth estimtaed to cost about $750,000 and which would make the hospital the largest Naval hospital in the country. Preliminary work already is under way on the $12,000,000 expansion project at the Norfolk Naval Air Station.

There have been reports that the Government intended taking over additional land at Willoughby and at Virginia Beach, adjacent to Fort Story, as well as on the Portsmouth side of the Elizabeth River, near Craney Island, but no authorization has been given and no money has been appropriated for such purposes.

Vast Sum for Navy Yard

Representative Darden said that at the Navy yard alone the Government had planned and made appropriations for the expenditure of $60,740,000 to date, with prospects there will be more to come.

The construction of an $8,500,000 dock and accessories will give to the yard the largest dock of its kind in the world. The Navy yard's assignments include a $48,000,000 aircraft carrier and a $2,500,000 minesweeper. One plane carrier already is under construction there.

Across the Roads at Newport News, the privately owned shipyard already is booming with employment past the 11,000 mark. Excluding the $17,000,000 liner America which leaves the yard Saturday, the Newport News plant has 18 ships building or contracted for.

These include a battleship and aircraft carrier now under way, an oil tanker, ten cargo vessels being built with a Government subsidy, and five fighting ships awarded the yard recently as part of the defense program.

The later group of five include three aircraft carriers at a cost of $43,662,000 each and two cruisers at $19,272,500 each, making a total of $169,530,000. As soon as the battleship Indiana and the aircraft carrier Hornet, now under way, are launched—probably in three or four months—two new carriers will be laid down. The yard is considering the construction of a large new shipway and perhaps a construction Pier, but these have not been decided upon.

Three Aircraft Carriers

Increased employment, which is expected to continue upward as work gets under way on the warships, has brought increased demand for housing. The Federal Housing Administration has made plans for a large colored settlement, and the Newport Housing Authority has applied for more than $500,000 in additional FHA funds to construct a 400-unit white housing project and a 100-unit Negro project. These projects, however, are pending.

All around, business and industrial conditions appear better than in any period since or immediately after the World War.

Langley Field, home of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics and the headquarters of the General Headquarters Air Force, has grown during the past 20 years from a $300,000 establishment into an airdrome representing probably more than $20,000,000.

The base undoubtedly will play an important role in the proposed expansion of the air force in connection with the defense program.

Lamb Crop Estimated Largest on Record

By the Associated Press

Based on reports from producers, the Agriculture Department yesterday estimated the 1940 lamb crop at 32,729,000 head, the largest on record. This was 3 per cent larger than the 1939 crop of 31,781,000 and 9 per cent larger than 1929-38 average of 30,085,000.

The increase over last year was nearly all in the Western sheep States where the crop was estimated at 21,613,000 head, compared with 20,808,000 in 1939.

Listen! with Glynn

When Bill Slocum, our predecessor in "Listen," left WJSV a couple of weeks ago to do special events and sports for C. B. S. in New York, none of us even suspected.

It's possible that a picture is necessary to get the idea across. But Bill to all of us represented the man-of-the-people type—rough diamond, heart of gold, loved by all who knew him, etc. Certainly the thought of Bill as a "social" leader had never occurred to us. Why I can remember when one Tuxedo did for both of us. It was used alternately about twice a year, with never an argument about precedence.

All this preliminary to reporting that the radio trade journals, in announcing Mr. Slocum's transfer, by some typographical legerdemain, have him labelled as "director of social events" for C. B. S. Which is a pretty special event in itself.

Such misunderstandings we do get into at C. B. S. Add to the Slocum business, the serious dilemma of our Miss Ann Gillis. In the mail yesterday, from a gentleman who shall be known as J. Philo Abercrombie, came a memento in the form of an Army Air Corps insignia. Miss G. was wearing it about unconcernedly, pretty happy and all, when our alert switchboard operator Veronica Fitzpatrick spotted it, gave out the glad cry: "Oh, when did you get engaged?"

Veteran Newswriter Had Served Several Papers in Capital

G. Franklin Wisner, 61, veteran newspaperman, who was one of the victims of the New Deal "purge" of the Federal Communications Commission, died yesterday in Garfield Hospital after a long illness. He lived at 601 Indian Spring drive, Silver Spring Md.

In the fall of 1938, Mr. Wisner was discharged on only a few hours' notice from his post as chief of the press section of the commission under a purge instituted by the former chairman, Frank B. McNinch. He had lived in retirement since.

Mr. Wisner became chief of the press section of the old Federal Radio Commission in 1927 and served the communications commission in the same capacity.

He was born in Hampstead, Md., and following his graduation from St. John's College, Annapolis, was principal of the Towson (Md.) High School. He started his newspaper career with the Baltimore Sun, later transferring to the Baltimore American.

He was a member of the National Press Club, and from 1914 to 1921 served as president of the Baltimore Press Club. His home was at 601 Indian Spring drive, Silver Spring, Md.

In 1921 he came to Washington as correspondent for the American. The following year he became White House correspondent for the New York Herald, and later covered the Senate for the old New York World.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Rosella B. Wisner, of Silver Spring, and a daughter, Mrs. Gordon Smith Parker, of Pittsburgh, Pa. Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Pumphrey's funeral home, 8420 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, Md. Burial will be in Druid Ridge Cemetery, Baltimore.

Overton to Ask Figures on 2-Way Police Car Radio

Senator Overton, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations, yesterday said he would ask the Commissioners to submit estimates on the equipping of all police scout cars with two-way radio.

Following another tour of District institutions in company with Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, Senator Overton said he thought that all motor patrolmen should be able to keep in constant touch with headquarters by short-wave radio. Police have been experimenting with two-way systems.

Senator Overton said he had visited Gallinger Hospital, the new District Morgue, the municipal tuberculosis clinic, and the Southwest Health Center on his tour.

Sand Firm Offers U. S. Land to Get Dredging Rights

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission would increase Federal holdings along the Moun Vernon Memorial highway, under the terms of an exchange authorized in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Lanham, of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

The measure paves the way for the Smoot Sand & Gravel Corporation to give title to the Government on 110 acres extending more than a mile along the highway and 800 feet deep below Hunting Creek, and 23.5 acres near Four Mile Run, in exchange for certain dredging privileges.

The Smoot firm would be authorized to dredge 85 acres of Government land. It also agrees to turn over an additional 150 acres of its own land to the Government after dredging.
